Accidents seriously injure 2

Four traffic accidents on Friday, involving a total of eight vehicles, resulted in serious injuries to two persons and minor injuries to three others.

The highway patrol reported that on Interstate 55, a half mile south of the Cape Girardeau city limits, at 12:45 p.m. a motorcycle and car accident injured one man.

Kevin Lee Smith, 21, of Cape Girardeau, was riding a motorcycle south down an exit ramp and ran into the back of a car on the ramp driven by Dennis Charles Ahrenhoersterbaeumer, 26, of St. Louis.

Smith was taken to Southeast Missouri Hospital in Cape Girardeau with minor injuries.

At 12:40 p.m. on Highway 60, one and a half mile west of the Mississippi River Bridge, a car and a semi-tractor-trailer truck were involved in an accident which resulted in serious injuries to the driver of the car.

Thomas Sterling, 27, of Cairo, was driving east when he swerved his car across the center line of the road and sideswiped the truck being driven west by Ernest H. Poole Jr., 39, of Cape Girardeau.

Sterling reportedly had his arm out the window of the car at the time of the collision and sustained severe damage to the arm. He was taken to Padco Hospital in Cairo and later transferred to a Paducah, Ky. hospital where the arm had to be amputated.

One mile north of Fredericktown at 3 p.m. on Highway 67 a two-car accident seriously injured a Fredericktown woman.

Novell Lila Kelly, 53, of Fredericktown, was traveling south and attempted a left turn in front of a northbound car driven by James Dewitt Yingling, 21, of Searcy, Ark., Yingling's vehicle struck the Kelly car in the right side.

Asia needs U.S., Japanese envoy says

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Japan's ambassador to the United States referred to "the so-called debacle in South Vietnam," and said Friday it would be tragic if the American presence were withdrawn from Asia.

Ambassador Takeshi Yasukawa told the 12th annual Japan-U.S. Businessmen's Conference that it was not just a matter of military presence but more importantly an economic and political presence.

"If at this critical juncture in world affairs the American people were to falter or lose confidence in their international leadership role, it would be tragic not only for the United States but also for Asia and the rest of the world's people who seek a better alternative to poverty and instability," he said.

"I am very confident that most of non-communist Asia retains the reliance and the aspirations to respond effectively to American leadership — if it is wisely adapted to new conditions."

About 50 senior executives of some of the largest corporations in Japan and the United States concluded three days of conferences by issuing a summation of their discussions.

It said they:

"...Agreed on the desirability of using long-term purchasing contracts as a means of ensuring a secure and continuing flow of commodities in Japan-U. S. trade relations..."

"...affirmed their common objective to assist developing countries in meeting their economic development needs..."

"...affirmed the essential role that their respective public and private sectors must play in developing joint programs to reduce consumption of traditional energy supplies and expand the development of alternative energy sources..."

"Let me mention quicly and categorically that most sensible Japanese, including Japanese leadership...do not question for one minute the U. S. defense commitment to Japan," Ambassador Yasukawa told the businessmen.

Their cooperative efforts are based on a formal treaty of mutual cooperation and security, he noted.

"This does not mean that such arrangements can ever be taken for granted," he said. "The vitality of solemn commitments is best maintained by continuing consultation and renewal of mutual understanding."

"These goals are unrealistic without U. S. economic and political participation," Ambassador Yasukawa said.

The peoples of Asia yearn for a chance to improve their self-reliance, expand regional cooperation and build economic and political institutions they will want to defend.

"We are living with the consequences of what the late Adlai Stevenson called 'the revolution of rising expectations.' And that revolution was largely inspired by the United States."

A declaration in the communique adopted by the conference said it is important that Japan and the United States continue to work together for peace and stability in Asia.

Senate extends pay to jobless

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate passed Friday a bill extending the right of jobless workers to get up to 65 weeks of benefits, after tying to it an extension of the $2,000 tax credit for home buyers.

The tax credit, enacted in the tax-cut bill in March, originally applied to new homes which were started before March 26. The new provision would extend this to June 19.

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., author of the provision, said the additional time would give an extra boost to the housing industry, already showing some signs of recovery.

The over-all bill was passed 70 to 3 and sent back to the House, which did not include any housing provision in its version.

The unemployment compensation features of the bill would extend for six months, to the end of this year, the right of jobless workers to get up to 65 weeks of benefit payments. Unless the measure becomes law by June 30, the final 13 weeks of benefits would no longer be available.

Achievement dinner planned for Fulton

An achievement dinner in honor of Mayor Donald Fulton has been scheduled at 8 p.m. Wednesday at the Ramada Inn.

Mike Cooper of Hayti, area youth specialist with the University of Missouri Extension Service, will be guest speaker at the banquet which is sponsored by the Sunset Community Block Club.

Guests will include T.B. Howard, former mayor and founder of Howardville; David Humes, mayor of Hayti Heights; Willie H. Hamilton, mayor of Howardville; Ed Andrews, mayor of Haywood City; Charles Williams, former mayor of Charleston and city and county officials.

Fulton was elected mayor of the city April 20 and is serving his fifth year on the City Council. He is also assistant principal at Sikeston High School.

Fulton holds a Bachelor of Science degree in education from Lincoln University at Jefferson City and a Master of Science degree in education from the University of Missouri-Columbia.

Wheat prices surprising

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Grain market observers expressed surprise Friday at the dramatic rise of wheat prices when, by all standards, they should be falling.

Normally, during the harvesting season, prices dip. This harvest, delayed by heavy rains, brought a July futures close Friday on the Kansas City Board of Trade of $3.32 a bushel, about 29 cents up from last Friday's close.

Cash premiums also stayed strong, putting on-farm prices in central Kansas above the $3 level.

Charleston blends past, future

By RICK MOREIN

CHARLESTON—The site of Charleston was originally entered in 1830 or 1831 by Humphrey Warren, who built a home on what is now the northwest corner of Center and Cypress streets. Little did he know that it would prosper into the county seat of what is now Mississippi County.

The city was laid off on land belonging to Joseph Moore, Thankful Randol and Wesley P. Bernard. It covered an area slightly larger than 16 acres, and was laid out into 12 blocks of 10 lots each.

Charleston became the county seat in 1845, and by 1859 there were 15 business establishments in the town.

Today, the city has a population in excess of 5,000 and contains five elementary schools, one junior high school and one high school. The city also has three manufacturing plants: Brown Shoe Co., Monsanto and Partin Sausage Co. Together they employ nearly 500 people.

There are 13 churches in Charleston.

Politically, Charleston is Democratic with a capital "D", and its favorite son is former Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, who still maintains a home here. Other prominent Missourians who have roots in Charleston a native son, Dr. Mark Scully, who is retiring June 30 after 19 years as president of Southeast Missouri State University at Cape Girardeau, and members of the Danforth family, which founded Ralston-Purina Co. of St. Louis, formerly lived here and a street in town bears the Danforth name.

The town contains many magnificent mansions, and when asked what the nicest thing about the town is, the townspeople reply that it is the people, who, they say, have a genuine concern for one another.

Charleston, in an effort to upgrade its image, is making concentrated plans to improve the quality of life there.

Tanna Parish, president of the Chamber of Commerce and director of the Charleston Urban Renewal Program, which is currently involved in renovating the downtown area of the city, says, "We are looking into an industrial consultant to improve the amount of industry here."

He also said, "We're going to put new sidewalks and canopies throughout the Main Street area."

You can judge the way that the city is going to administer the sales tax, if it passes, by the way they put out the flags on flag day, there wasn't a single one out. I guess, since it was on Saturday, the City Manager and the rest of the boys were out fishing or playing golf or something, but anyway they didn't pay any overtime for having the flags put out and taken down. That's about the same attention that will be paid for the money that comes in off the sales tax.

XXX

Although members of Congress seem to be blind to this economic fact, it has been noticed that many businesses cannot afford to employ as many people as they once did. The most direct approach to solving this problem would seem to be to cut business taxes in order to leave employers more money with which to produce, invest, and hire. Matched cuts in government spending would be required, of course, to keep government borrowing from crowding out private borrowing.

Instead, according to National Review, the McGovern Congress apparently based its tax cut bill on several curious assumptions. First, that federal spending is no burden on anyone if it is financed by borrowing or creating money rather than by taxing. Second, that taxes on illusory inventory profits and capital gains due to inflation do not affect the ability of enterprises to produce and invest. Third, that any increase in any type of spending will inspire an increase in production in depressed industries, regarding of the net profits they can get from producing.

There is virtually nothing in the something -for-nothing tax bill that could be defended on economic grounds -- that is, as the most cost-effective means of accomplishing the stated goal of recovery. How else but as a blatant attempt to buy votes for incumbents can we explain such gems as a reduction of up to $2,000 in taxes of anyone wealthy enough to buy a new house, or an extra $50 to everyone on Social Security regardless of other income or wealth? The only clear stimulus to production -- a cut in tax rates for tiny corporations -- will be a big boon to incorporated professionals. The rest of the bill, unless financed by the printing press, is mainly redistributive. We are to pay higher taxes tomorrow, to service the debt increase, in order to finance politically targeted tax breaks and gimmicks today. And we are to do without the houses and other goodies that would otherwise have been produced with the savings diverted into Treasury securities.

Looking beyond the next election, which is difficult for politicians, the net effect is not a stimulus but a drain on the private economy.

PRICELESS ADVANTAGES

Concern for human dignity is not the exclusive province of modern consumer activists and civil rights leaders. Ever since the turn of the century, the U.S. private health insurance industry has been dedicated to the principle that "...medical prepayment enhances the dignity, the productiveness, and the relevance of the individual."

Man may sometimes place too much emphasis upon facts that are concrete and impersonal simply because they are easy to measure. By such tangible criteria the individualistic approach has won the private health insurance industry in the United States many laurels over the years. Among its visible accomplishments, the industry has constantly increased the range of its health care and coverage in terms of numbers of people protected and value of benefits provided. It has been highly innovative in harnessing new technology to improve existing policies and coverage, and the U.S. health insurancs industry has thus grown to be a giant among the health programs of the world. In fact, its reputation for excellence has attracted over 80 million people in the U.S. and Puerto Rico to one prepaid medical care financing organization alone, making it "...the largest voluntary effort by medicine to serve Americans."

The list of tangible and outstanding accomplishments could go on forever. But for the essence of what private health insurance in the United States has achieved, one must return once again to the matter of concern for "human dignity." The private health insurance industry in America realizes that the human element is just as important as the tangibles of production, materials and finance--perhaps more so--because acceptance and support by people makes the U.S. health care system work. In the U.S. medical system, people take precedence over paperwork and governmental red tape. As the industry spokesman asks, "...how do you measure the increase in freedom and human dignity that results when medical prepayment eliminates a man's concern about crushing costs?" Private health insurance in America, as a means of both preserving and financing the highest quality health care, has become a priceless national asset.

COLLISIONS LAUNCH
'NEAR MISS' STUDY

The nation's overall traffic fatality toll decreased by 17 per cent in 1974 as compared with 1973, but the number of deaths resulting from uneven contests between trains and motor vehicles climbed by 8 per cent.

The National Safety Council recorded nearly 1,400 traffic fatalities at grade crossings last year, up from the 1,300 recorded in 1973. In addition, it says, there was "a remendous number" of incidents in which vehicles narrowly excaped being struck.

In an effort to combat the increase, the council is putting new emphasis on an individualized program of motorist education called the "Near Miss Program."

Under the program, explains its volunteer chairman, Otto F. Sonefeld, an official of the Santa Fe Railroad, cooperating railroads have instructed their train crews, where possible, to record the license numbers and identifying characteristics of vehicles that try to beat the train across a grade crossing.

Where the ownership of the vehicle can be established, the railroad personally contacts the driver or organization that owns the vehicle to point out the seriousness of the situation. If personal contact isn't possible, a letter is sent to the vehicle owner, and in all cases, a data card on the incident is sent to the council's headquarters in Chicago where the information is computerized.

The railroads' contacts with the drivers involved "are strictly educational and not intended to be punitive in any way." Sonefeld stresses. The reaction from most drivers has been favorable, he says. Many simply are not aware of the hazards inherent at every grade crossing.

Co-operating railroads have reported 1,362 near misses in the past two and a half years. In more than half the cases, the train was 100 feet or less from the crossing when the vehicle cleared the tracks.

When enough data on grade-crossing incidents is gathered, the council plans to use the information for further educational programs and as a basis for possible legislative action aimed at cutting the number of vehicle-train accidents and near misses.

PLENTY OF WARNING!

Today's energy shortage embodies a chronological record of public and official apathy to known facts that can only be described as incredible. Consider a few quotations from the remarks that have been made over the years by leaders in public and private life relative to tax and regulatory policies of government that began undermining our energy-based society more than 20 years ago.

Most of the following comments relate to the folly of imposing public utility regulation on natural gas producers. In 1953, the vice chairman of the Committee on Mineral Law for the state of Texas warned of this type of regulation: "Imposing utility rate base will offer inadequate incentive to producers...the consumer as well as the producer will profit from the absence of federal regulation and both will suffer from its imposition." Shortly after the Supreme Court decision that imposed this type of regulation on gas producers, the president of a major oil company noted that: "With demand increasing and the rate of discovery decreasing, after a time a definite shortage of gas occurs...the net result to the consumer is a shortage of supply and an increase in rates." The warnings continued to come through the years. In 1957, President Eisenhower, in a Budget Message to Congress, said: "Legislation freeing gas producers from public utility type regulation is essential if the incentives to find and develop new supplies of gas are to be preserved...."

In 1961, the chairman of the Federal Power Commission stated: "We cannot expect him (the gas producer) to continue risking his money exploring for gas at the pace which the national interest requires...." A Houston, Texas, consulting geologist in 1960 said: "I can safely predict that between now and 1975 we will have an energy crisis in this country. Then the people will say 'The industry is to blame, why weren't we told?' Well, I'm telling them now."

The energy crisis is no mystery. Its cause and its cure have been known for two decades by competent energy authorities. Their recommendations have been ignored.

REMOVING MYSTERY
AND FEAR

Slowly the educational process of building a grass roots understanding of nuclear power plants is moving ahead--mostly on the initiative of investor-owned electric companies that have been fighting a battle against time to overcome unreasoning fear concerning the safety of nuclear energy. Many companies have constructed visitor information centers at nuclear plants to help build a reservoir of nuclear knowledge among ordinary citizens.

One such visitor center, in connection with a nuclear plant of a major southeastern utility company, has become one of the state of Georgia's newest tourist attractions. The center provides an educational experience for visitors of all ages. Animated exhibits tell the story of nuclear power, using special lighting techniques to create illusions. The director of the center reports, "We have had more than 38,000 visitors since the center opened in the summer of 1971. People from 46 states and 19 countries have come to see this colorful illustration of how nuclear energy is used to create electricity." The center contains electric exhibits and specially-designed film projections using unusual techniques that unleash the imagination of the viewer as the story of nuclear power unfolds. The exhibits help remove the mystery, fear and misunderstanding from the science of nuclear energy.

Nuclear energy is another step in the long march of human progress. Like early man, who feared to use fire, we hesitate to cross the threshold of this latest mystery of life. Visitor information centers of nuclear power plants beckon to all who believe in the future.

'IS WASHINGTON WORKING?'

WASHINGTON — There has been too much criticism in the country lately as to the lack of action in Washington on the crucial issues of our time.

The fact is that everyone in this town is working as hard as he or she possibly can. The problem is nobody understands how our government operates when the President of the country is of one party and the majority of the Congress is of another.

Let us take a hypothetical example to illustrate the point.

Suppose one of the most pressing needs of the country is a national policy on massage parlors. Futurists would warn that if we continue at the present rate we will run out of rubbing alcohol and steam by 1989.

The President in his message to Congress would urge strong conservation measures, including a tax on turtle oil, as a means of cutting down the number of massages every American has each week.

But the Democratic Congress would claim that a tax on turtle oil would hurt the little man – the truck driver, the airline pilot and the salesman – who needs massages to relax him from his work.

House Majority Leader Carl Albert would then announce that the Democrats would come up with an all-inclusive national massage policy that the people really wanted, instead of the stop-gap measures advocated by the President.

The President would go on television with a calendar, and appeal to the American people. He would tell them that whatever the Democrats came up with on massage parlors would just add to the national deficit and increase inflation. He would warn that no matter what bill Congress proposed, includinghis own, he wouldveto it.

The Houe Subcommittee on Massage Parlors would hold hearings for five months. They would hear from massage parlor owners, masseurs and masseuses, and natural steam producers. Then the committee would vote out the most comprehensive bill ever presented to Congress.

It would fall for a Federal No-Fault Massage Parlor Agency which would monitor all aspects of the massage industry. A surtax of $2 would be placed on every bottle of rubbing alcohol. No new massage parlors would be built without an environmental impact study as to what effect it would have on the surrounding area. It would also provide for a billion-dollar subsidy for people who could not afford massages, to be paid through Social Security benefits. And it would call for price controls on steam baths, in spite of warnings by the steam industry that unless the price of steam was deregulated there would be a lot of cold shower rooms in the country this winter.

Aftert hot debate, a strip-mining bill would be tacked onto the massage parlor legislation at the last moment.

The Democratically controllee Senate would pass a similar bill with its own amendment prohibiting the CIA by law from operating a massage parlor within the continental limits of the United States.

When the bill finally got to the President's desk he would veto it without reading it, explaining to the press, "I know anything they send down from The Hill is no damn good."

The House and Senate Democratic leadership would immediately swing into action, demanding that every Democrat vote to override the President's veto. Each Democrat would pledge his loyalty to the partyand then go out on the floor and allow the President's veto to be sustained.

Thus the country once again would have no national massage parlor policy. The President would blame Congress and Congress would blame the Administration for ignoring the crisis. Who was really to blame? No one and everyone. And that, dear citizen, is what Hamlet (of Hamlet's Massage Parlor in Arlington, Va.) would say "is the rub."

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
FBI Break-in, More on Strom

By JACK ANDERSON
with
Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — There have been whispers around Washington that the FBI, like the CIA, has occasionally used burglaries as an investigative technique. We have now nailed down one illegal FBI break-in.

It happened some four years ago during a flurry of bombing threats against synagogues and death threats against Jewis h leaders.

The FBI, called in to investigate, became suspicious of a known bigot a few miles from Washington, D.C. Tipped off that he might be plotting violence against Jewish leaders, an FBI break-in squad entered the bigot's dwelling illegally in search of incriminating evidence. The burglary attempt was faked to look like an ordinary housebreaking.

Word of the FBI break-in reached Sen. Howard Baker, R.-Tenn., during the Senate Watergate investigation. Thinking the incident migh have Watergate overtones, Baker asked committee counsel Sam Dash to check into it.

Dash confirmed from official sources that the FBI committed the break-in but that it had nothing to do with Watergate.

Footnote: Presented with our information, Dash acknowledged his role in the incident. The FBI refused comment.

THURMOND'S REVENGE: We recently described the plight of a lowly Pentagon officer, Lt. Col. Wilfred Ebel, who made the mistake of antagonizing Sen. Strom Thurmond, R.-S.C.

Old Strom, you see, is no ordinary senator. He is also a spare-time, two-star general, the commander of Capitol Hill's bay window brigade, the beau de guerre of the congressional cloakrooms. No military hero is more honored by the Pentagon than is Thurmond who leads the Army's legislative battles in the Senate.

The unfortunate Ebel, as part of a confidential study of the Army reserves, criticized one of Thurmond's comrades-in-arms. Ebel portrayed Maj. Gen. J. Milnor Roberts, the Army reserves chief, as lazy and incompetent.

From on high on Capitol Hill, Old Strom snorted with displeasure over such heresy. He protested to Army Secretary Howard "Bo" Callaway, an able, amiable fellow, who knows where Army appropriations come from.

Callaway obligingly brought down the Pentagon roof on Ebel's head. The Army Inspector General was turned loose not against Roberts, who was accused of mismanaging the reserves, but against Ebel who had dared to say so. Ebel's name also was dropped from the promotion list, his Pentagon job was yanked out from under him and he lost a bid to become executive director of the Reserve Officers Association.

When we reported all this, the Thurmond apparatus turned upon us. We were assaulted with telephone calls and letters from the Pentagon, Capitol Hill and other strategic places. The general theme, omitting the abuse, was that we had exposed the wrong man and that we should have taken Roberts' side against Ebel.

Old Strom himself sent out letters accusing us of "extreme exaggeration and falsification."

Meanwhile, the obliging Callaway, with an eye still on Old Strom across the Potomac, tried to soothe Roberts' ruffled feelings by awarding him the Army's highest noncombat award, the Distinguished Service Medal.

Our report on Roberts, however, wasn't based upon Ebel's evaluation alone. Not only did we check with our own independent sources in the Pentagon, but we have obtained still another official evaluation which Callaway must have thought was safely buried in Army files.

Gen. Bernard Rogers, who heads the Army Forces Command, also conducted a study of Roberts' operation. This study, which was submitted to the Army Vice Chief of Staff, backs up Ebel's evaluation.

The Rogers study charges that Roberts' office caused "the needless waste of tens of millions of dollars in training costs."

On Nov. 4, 1974, for example, Rogers' command handed down to Roberts "122 troop actions designed to eliminate units which were poor performers and which were excess to Department of Army force requirements." Yet four months later, only eight of the money-saving actions had been taken while "114 remained incomplete," the report alleges.

The study, unusual for its blunt language, concludes "the current system has almost ceased to function." And much of the blame is laid squarely at Roberts' door, particularly with respect to his failures in getting units into combat readiness.

Yet this same Roberts, who allegedly helped to waste tens of millions of dollars, received the Distinguished Service Medal from Callaway. And Roberts' implacable champion is none other than the old economizer himself, Sen. Strom Thurmond.

Footnote: We asked Roberts for his comments. He acknowledged there had been delays in eliminating money-wasting units. But he cited documents showing other Army officers were also responsible for the delays. He claimed that he had been merely "a nice, convenient scapegoat" for the Roger report. "It sounds as if it's simple," Roberts said, "but it's not. The system needs to be improved. The Army is loaded with bureaucracy."

Demand New Probes: Leftist Coalition Attempting To Turn Mayaguez Rescue into New Watergate

WASHINGTON — Now a gung-ho coalition of radicals, left-of-center Congressmen and ultra-left labor leaders are attempting to turn the month-old rescue of the S. S. Mayaguez's crew from Communist Cambodia into a new Watergate.

The McGovernite political consortium is lobbying and lobbing charges against President Ford. Not the least of these is that he is personally responsible for the deaths of 38 "persons" in the swift rescue venture. And that the 31-year-old freighter and its 39-man crew weren't on any "innocent" venture. And that the vessel shouldn't have been in those Asian seas under any circumstances.

And that it had deliberately sailed into Cambodian territorial waters. And that the rescue efforts weren't at all needed because the crew "had never been in any physical danger."

And that, in effect, Jerry Ford was attempting to launch another Asian war without the permission of, or consultation with, the Congress. And that he had violated the new war powers act. Thus the insinuation is that President Ford is open to impeachment moves. Or at least a new series of investigations by the Senate Foreign Relations and the House International Affairs Committees.

A thorough examination of the charges, speeches and testimony hurled or delivered by men ranging from Sens. Jack Javits (R.-N.Y.) and Tom Eagleton (D.-Mo.), to Rep. Robert Drinan (D.-Mass.), a passionately dedicated Kennedyite, practically adds up to a master charge that the American rescue action had actually enticed and incited the neo-Maoist Cambodian junta and its navy.

It is Rep. Drinan who accuses Mr. Ford of personal responsibility for the deaths of our Marines and Navy men. It is Drinan who, without having talked to a single crew member, asserted they never were in physical danger.

It is the National Board of the Americans For Democratic Action (ADA), a group too far left even for the old Socialist and CIO unions, which now demands a series of investigations of the Mayaguez affair.

It is the militant leftist Distributive Workers leaders who said: "Even if the Mayaguez was within its territorial rights and its purpose was innocent -- assumptions which, in the light of recent history are questionable -- why was this American merchant vessel permitted to sail these troubled waters in explosively critical times?"

No mention is made by this strange assortment of fellow travelers on the anti-Ford road of the fact that the Mayaguez was 60 miles off the Cambodian coast. Or that it was on a regular route traversed for ages and more recently by other American, Swedish, Panamanian, and South Korean freighters.

No mention is made of the record which shows Cambodian gunboats shooting warnings at other nationals' "foreign flag" vessels, but actually threatening to sink the Mayaguez, finally boarding her and removing her crew to the Cambodian mainland.

I've checked with Seafarers union leaders of the 28 unlicensed crewmen aboard, and with leaders of the licensed men. And with officials of the National Maritime Union (NMU), two of whose members volunteered to get into helicopters, fly out to the destroyer escort U.S.S. Holt, and from this craft's deck bound onto the Mayaguez to get up steam if the original crew weren't rescued.

There is no record of Messrs. Drinan, Javits, Eagleton or any of the ADA people contacting Capt. Charles Miller or other crew members before the charges were hurled.

Nor is there any record of consultation by the McGovern-Kennedy consortium with the U.S. Navy's Military Sealift Command which recruited six U.S. Civil Service merchant mariners to man the Mayaguez at Tang island if the regular crew weren't saved. Not until the last minute did any know of their safety.

Actually the volunteer civil service crew -- four licensed civilian merchant marine officers and two NMU crewmen – got aboard the empty Mayaguez, cut the anchor with an acetylene torch, started the emergency diesel generator going, and were set to sail when word came of the white-flagged fishing boat delivering the captive seafarers with their captain and mates.

Thus it's difficult not to see the coalition's demand for an investigation of President Ford as being anything but politically motivated. And as an effort to denigrate this dramatic warning to the Communist world that the U.S. isn't a paper tiger.

Or does anything go now that 1976 is thundering down on us?

You can judge the way that the city is going to administer the sales tax, if it passes, by the way they put out the flags on flag day, there wasn't a single one out. I guess, since it was on Saturday, the City Manager and the rest of the boys were out fishing or playing golf or something, but anyway they didn't pay any overtime for having the flags put out and taken down. Although members of Congress seem to be blind to this economic fact, it has been noticed that many businesses cannot afford to employ as many people as they once did. The most direct approach to solving this problem would seem to be to cut business taxes in order to leave employers more money with which to produce, invest, and hire. Matched cuts in government spending would be required, of course, to keep government borrowing from crowding out private borrowing.

Instead, according to National Review, the McGovern Congress apparently based its tax cut bill on several curious assumptions. First, that federal spending is no burden on anyone if it is financed by borrowing or creating money rather than by taxing. Second, that taxes on illusory inventory profits and capital gains due to inflation do not affect the ability of enterprises to produce and invest. Third, that any increase in any type of spending will inspire an increase in production in depressed industries, regarding of the net profits they can get from producing.

There is virtually nothing in the something -for-nothing tax bill that could be defended on economic grounds -- that is, as the most cost-effective means of accomplishing the stated goal of recovery. How else but as a blatant attempt to buy votes for incumbents can we explain such gems as a reduction of up to $2,000 in taxes of anyone wealthy enough to buy a new house, or an extra $50 to everyone on Social Security regardless of other income or wealth? The only clear stimulus to production -- a cut in tax rates for tiny corporations -- will be a big boon to incorporated professionals. The rest of the bill, unless financed by the printing press, is mainly redistributive. We are to pay higher taxes tomorrow, to service the debt increase, in order to finance politically targeted tax breaks and gimmicks today. And we are to do without the houses and other goodies that would otherwise have been produced with the savings diverted into Treasury securities.

Looking beyond the next election, which is difficult for politicians, the net effect is not a stimulus but a drain on the private economy.

PRICELESS ADVANTAGES

Concern for human dignity is not the exclusive province of modern consumer activists and civil rights leaders. Ever since the turn of the century, the U.S. private health insurance industry has been dedicated to the principle that "...medical prepayment enhances the dignity, the productiveness, and the relevance of the individual."

Man may sometimes place too much emphasis upon facts that are concrete and impersonal simply because they are easy to measure. 'IS WASHINGTON WORKING?'

WASHINGTON — There has been too much criticism in the country lately as to the lack of action in Washington on the crucial issues of our time.

The fact is that everyone in this town is working as hard as he or she possibly can. The problem is nobody understands how our government operates when the President of the country is of one party and the majority of the Congress is of another.

Let us take a hypothetical example to illustrate the point.

Suppose one of the most pressing needs of the country is a national policy on massage parlors. Futurists would warn that if we continue at the present rate we will run out of rubbing alcohol and steam by 1989.

The President in his message to Congress would urge strong conservation measures, including a tax on turtle oil, as a means of cutting down the number of massages every American has each week.

But the Democratic Congress would claim that a tax on turtle oil would hurt the little man – the truck driver, the airline pilot and the salesman – who needs massages to relax him from his work.

House Majority Leader Carl Albert would then announce that the Democrats would come up with an all-inclusive national massage policy that the people really wanted, instead of the stop-gap measures advocated by the President.

The President would go on television with a calendar, and appeal to the American people. He would tell them that whatever the Democrats came up with on massage parlors would just add to the national deficit and increase inflation. He would warn that no matter what bill Congress proposed, includinghis own, he wouldveto it.

The Houe Subcommittee on Massage Parlors would hold hearings for five months. They would hear from massage parlor owners, masseurs and masseuses, and natural steam producers. Then the committee would vote out the most comprehensive bill ever presented to Congress.

It would fall for a Federal No-Fault Massage Parlor Agency which would monitor all aspects of the massage industry. A surtax of $2 would be placed on every bottle of rubbing alcohol. No new massage parlors would be built without an environmental impact study as to what effect it would have on the surrounding area. It would also provide for a billion-dollar subsidy for people who could not afford massages, to be paid through Social Security benefits. And it would call for price controls on steam baths, in spite of warnings by the steam industry that unless the price of steam was deregulated there would be a lot of cold shower rooms in the country this winter.

Aftert hot debate, a strip-mining bill would be tacked onto the massage parlor legislation at the last moment.

The Democratically controllee Senate would pass a similar bill with its own amendment prohibiting the CIA by law from operating a massage parlor within the continental limits of the United States.

When the bill finally got to the President's desk he would veto it without reading it, explaining to the press, "I know anything they send down from The Hill is no damn good."

The House and Senate Democratic leadership would immediately swing into action, demanding that every Democrat vote to override the President's veto. Each Democrat would pledge his loyalty to the partyand then go out on the floor and allow the President's veto to be sustained.

Thus the country once again would have no national massage parlor policy. The President would blame Congress and Congress would blame the Administration for ignoring the crisis. Who was really to blame? No one and everyone. And that, dear citizen, is what Hamlet (of Hamlet's Massage Parlor in Arlington, Va.) would say "is the rub."

Demand New Probes: Leftist Coalition Attempting To Turn Mayaguez Rescue into New Watergate

WASHINGTON — Now a gung-ho coalition of radicals, left-of-center Congressmen and ultra-left labor leaders are attempting to turn the month-old rescue of the S. S. Mayaguez's crew from Communist Cambodia into a new Watergate.

The McGovernite political consortium is lobbying and lobbing charges against President Ford. Not the least of these is that he is personally responsible for the deaths of 38 "persons" in the swift rescue venture. And that the 31-year-old freighter and its 39-man crew weren't on any "innocent" venture. And that the vessel shouldn't have been in those Asian seas under any circumstances.

And that it had deliberately sailed into Cambodian territorial waters. And that the rescue efforts weren't at all needed because the crew "had never been in any physical danger."

And that, in effect, Jerry Ford was attempting to launch another Asian war without the permission of, or consultation with, the Congress. And that he had violated the new war powers act. Thus the insinuation is that President Ford is open to impeachment moves. Or at least a new series of investigations by the Senate Foreign Relations and the House International Affairs Committees.

A thorough examination of the charges, speeches and testimony hurled or delivered by men ranging from Sens. Jack Javits (R.-N.Y.) and Tom Eagleton (D.-Mo.), to Rep. Robert Drinan (D.-Mass.), a passionately dedicated Kennedyite, practically adds up to a master charge that the American rescue action had actually enticed and incited the neo-Maoist Cambodian junta and its navy.

It is Rep. Drinan who accuses Mr. Ford of personal responsibility for the deaths of our Marines and Navy men. It is Drinan who, without having talked to a single crew member, asserted they never were in physical danger.

It is the National Board of the Americans For Democratic Action (ADA), a group too far left even for the old Socialist and CIO unions, which now demands a series of investigations of the Mayaguez affair.

It is the militant leftist Distributive Workers leaders who said: "Even if the Mayaguez was within its territorial rights and its purpose was innocent -- assumptions which, in the light of recent history are questionable -- why was this American merchant vessel permitted to sail these troubled waters in explosively critical times?"

No mention is made by this strange assortment of fellow travelers on the anti-Ford road of the fact that the Mayaguez was 60 miles off the Cambodian coast. Or that it was on a regular route traversed for ages and more recently by other American, Swedish, Panamanian, and South Korean freighters.

No mention is made of the record which shows Cambodian gunboats shooting warnings at other nationals' "foreign flag" vessels, but actually threatening to sink the Mayaguez, finally boarding her and removing her crew to the Cambodian mainland.

I've checked with Seafarers union leaders of the 28 unlicensed crewmen aboard, and with leaders of the licensed men. And with officials of the National Maritime Union (NMU), two of whose members volunteered to get into helicopters, fly out to the destroyer escort U.S.S. Holt, and from this craft's deck bound onto the Mayaguez to get up steam if the original crew weren't rescued.

There is no record of Messrs. Drinan, Javits, Eagleton or any of the ADA people contacting Capt. Charles Miller or other crew members before the charges were hurled.

Nor is there any record of consultation by the McGovern-Kennedy consortium with the U.S. Navy's Military Sealift Command which recruited six U.S. Civil Service merchant mariners to man the Mayaguez at Tang island if the regular crew weren't saved. Not until the last minute did any know of their safety.

Actually the volunteer civil service crew -- four licensed civilian merchant marine officers and two NMU crewmen – got aboard the empty Mayaguez, cut the anchor with an acetylene torch, started the emergency diesel generator going, and were set to sail when word came of the white-flagged fishing boat delivering the captive seafarers with their captain and mates.

Thus it's difficult not to see the coalition's demand for an investigation of President Ford as being anything but politically motivated. And as an effort to denigrate this dramatic warning to the Communist world that the U.S. isn't a paper tiger.

Or does anything go now that 1976 is thundering down on us?

JACK ANDERSON SAYS: FBI Break-in, More on Strom

By JACK ANDERSON
with
Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — There have been whispers around Washington that the FBI, like the CIA, has occasionally used burglaries as an investigative technique. We have now nailed down one illegal FBI break-in.

It happened some four years ago during a flurry of bombing threats against synagogues and death threats against Jewis h leaders.

The FBI, called in to investigate, became suspicious of a known bigot a few miles from Washington, D.C. Tipped off that he might be plotting violence against Jewish leaders, an FBI break-in squad entered the bigot's dwelling illegally in search of incriminating evidence. The burglary attempt was faked to look like an ordinary housebreaking.

Word of the FBI break-in reached Sen. Howard Baker, R.-Tenn., during the Senate Watergate investigation. Thinking the incident migh have Watergate overtones, Baker asked committee counsel Sam Dash to check into it.

Dash confirmed from official sources that the FBI committed the break-in but that it had nothing to do with Watergate.

Footnote: Presented with our information, Dash acknowledged his role in the incident. The FBI refused comment.

THURMOND'S REVENGE: We recently described the plight of a lowly Pentagon officer, Lt. Col. Wilfred Ebel, who made the mistake of antagonizing Sen. Strom Thurmond, R.-S.C.

Old Strom, you see, is no ordinary senator. He is also a spare-time, two-star general, the commander of Capitol Hill's bay window brigade, the beau de guerre of the congressional cloakrooms. No military hero is more honored by the Pentagon than is Thurmond who leads the Army's legislative battles in the Senate.

The unfortunate Ebel, as part of a confidential study of the Army reserves, criticized one of Thurmond's comrades-in-arms. Ebel portrayed Maj. Gen. J. Milnor Roberts, the Army reserves chief, as lazy and incompetent.

From on high on Capitol Hill, Old Strom snorted with displeasure over such heresy. He protested to Army Secretary Howard "Bo" Callaway, an able, amiable fellow, who knows where Army appropriations come from.

Callaway obligingly brought down the Pentagon roof on Ebel's head. The Army Inspector General was turned loose not against Roberts, who was accused of mismanaging the reserves, but against Ebel who had dared to say so. Ebel's name also was dropped from the promotion list, his Pentagon job was yanked out from under him and he lost a bid to become executive director of the Reserve Officers Association.

When we reported all this, the Thurmond apparatus turned upon us. We were assaulted with telephone calls and letters from the Pentagon, Capitol Hill and other strategic places. The general theme, omitting the abuse, was that we had exposed the wrong man and that we should have taken Roberts' side against Ebel.

Old Strom himself sent out letters accusing us of "extreme exaggeration and falsification."

Meanwhile, the obliging Callaway, with an eye still on Old Strom across the Potomac, tried to soothe Roberts' ruffled feelings by awarding him the Army's highest noncombat award, the Distinguished Service Medal.

Our report on Roberts, however, wasn't based upon Ebel's evaluation alone. Not only did we check with our own independent sources in the Pentagon, but we have obtained still another official evaluation which Callaway must have thought was safely buried in Army files.

Gen. Bernard Rogers, who heads the Army Forces Command, also conducted a study of Roberts' operation. This study, which was submitted to the Army Vice Chief of Staff, backs up Ebel's evaluation.

The Rogers study charges that Roberts' office caused "the needless waste of tens of millions of dollars in training costs."

On Nov. 4, 1974, for example, Rogers' command handed down to Roberts "122 troop actions designed to eliminate units which were poor performers and which were excess to Department of Army force requirements." Yet four months later, only eight of the money-saving actions had been taken while "114 remained incomplete," the report alleges.

The study, unusual for its blunt language, concludes "the current system has almost ceased to function." And much of the blame is laid squarely at Roberts' door, particularly with respect to his failures in getting units into combat readiness.

Yet this same Roberts, who allegedly helped to waste tens of millions of dollars, received the Distinguished Service Medal from Callaway. And Roberts' implacable champion is none other than the old economizer himself, Sen. Strom Thurmond.

Footnote: We asked Roberts for his comments. He acknowledged there had been delays in eliminating money-wasting units. But he cited documents showing other Army officers were also responsible for the delays. He claimed that he had been merely "a nice, convenient scapegoat" for the Roger report. "It sounds as if it's simple," Roberts said, "but it's not. The system needs to be improved. The Army is loaded with bureaucracy."

What's the law?

The case of the unsexy marriage

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

What Marvin liked most about his wife were his arms. His wife Judy, however, offered more resistance to his advances than encountered by most employers when chasing around after their secretaries. In fact, on the rare occasions that Marvin succeeded in getting close enough to her to grab her, she'd shake him off like a pesky mosquito.

The result? Marvin suffered a severe case of frostbitten feelings and, finally, sued to end his marriage.

"I can't get to first base with my wife," he complained to a judge. "She's so cold to me the water on my knee all but freezes Without love and sex, a marriage can't go on."

"Love's O.K.," was Judy's answer, "if you happen to go in for that kind of thing. But as far as I'm concerned, all is not sex that appeals. It just doesn't send me. However, a disinterest in sex is no sane reason to end an otherwise happy marriage."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you free Marvin from his unsexy wife?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held, in effect, that making love is part of marriage. And, if it can be proven that either spouse, without reason, refuses to participate in that marital obligation, it constitutes matrimonial desertion and can be the basis to end a marriage.

What benefit are food elements?

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'd like some basic information abouh food and body chemistry. Just what does what do to what? There is such an amount of information or misinformation around about calories, cholesterol, saturated fats, unsaturated fats, animal fats, vegetable fats, protein, carbohydrates, and sooner or later, each substance is the evil one or the life saver, depending on who is writing or talking about it. I am completely confused.

I'd like to know what are the necessary substances, what are the beneficial ones, and what are the harmful ones? Which ones build the body? Which ones maintain it? Which ones destroy it? Am I correct in presuming that unsaturated (vegetable fats) are good fats and saturated fats (animal fats) are the harmful ones?

Is protein the body builder? If so, what type of protein food is available, low or without cholesterol, which I understand is present in large quantities in milk, cheese and eggs, which are high protein foods.

Along the same line, what is the difference between processed and unprocessed foods, such as cheese and flour? And what exactly does the term mean? Ice cream, coffee, tea, salt, pepper, gelatin, sugar — do these substances have any nutritional value? Do they have any harmful effects? Are there any guidelines along which one could discover just what has gone into a product, and this way conclude for himself whether the item is beneficial or harmful? I believe my ignorance and confusion over the subject is evident. Can you inform me?

DEAR READER — The first step to knowledge is confusion. I can't answer all your questions in one column. I will say that your letter exemplifies the general confusion of the public today. I'm crusading, you might say, for increasing people's knowledge of health — the big gap is in our educational system. It does seem to me that one of the most important things a person should learn, to cope with living, is how his own body works and how to take care of it. What could be more relevant, if I may use that word? Most of our school systems have little time devoted to this most important basic knowledge. The young people are interested, too, I have learned from my mail. They are like you and can't get solid information.

The subject is large. You will need to understand how food is processed or, as you say, what does what do to what. I have written two books on these topics. Don't buy them, just go to the library and ask for "Metabolics: Putting Your Food Energy to Work" (Harper and Row, 1974) for information on processing your food, and "What You Need to Know About Food and Cooking For Health" (Viking Press, 1973) for information on food items, preparation and food values. You will find most of the questions you have raised discussed in those two books and the scientific reasons involved.

I would like to comment that, while it is generally believed that saturated fats are more likely to cause a rise in cholesterol levels, too much fat of any kind is not considered good. And, you can use fortified skim milk or low fat cottage cheese as a good source of protein without getting any significant amounts of fat or cholesterol in your diet.

Vacation savings

You can shut off the water heater when you go on vacation to save a few dollars a month. And if you turn up your refrigerator a few degrees for the time you'll be gone, you can save from $2 to $4.

3 judge panel rules to give widowers rights

NEW YORK (AP) — Widowers have the right to the same Social Security benefits as widows, a three-judge federal panel has ruled.

The decision Thursday made as many as 400,000 surviving widowers in the nation eligible for benefits for the first time. The cost to the government for the first year could be as high as $333 million, one judge estimated.

The judges threw out a previous requirement that in order to receive survivor benefits, the widower must have been receiving at least half of his support from his wife at the time of her death.

"... there is not the slightest scintilla of support for the proposition that working women are less concerned about their spouses welfare in old age than are men," the judges ruled.

Asst. U.S. Atty. Pamela McGuire said the decision would be appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The case was brought by Leon Goldfarb, 71, of Queens, who retired in July 1971 as managing analyst for the U.S. Signal Corps. As a federal employe, he paid no Social Security taxes.

Goldfarb's claim was denied when he applied for survivor's benefits following the death in 1968 of his wife Hannah, a public school teacher for 25 years.

If the court's ruling holds up under appeal, Goldfarb is expected to recover about $10,000 for a period during which he "would have been qualified to receive benefits but for the discrimination against widowers now held to be unconstitutional," the judges said.

Five similar suits are pending in Washington, New Jersey, Ohio, Florida and Maryland.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'd like some basic information abouh food and body chemistry. Just what does what do to what? There is such an amount of information or misinformation around about calories, cholesterol, saturated fats, unsaturated fats, animal fats, vegetable fats, protein, carbohydrates, and sooner or later, each substance is the evil one or the life saver, depending on who is writing or talking about it. I am completely confused.

I'd like to know what are the necessary substances, what are the beneficial ones, and what are the harmful ones? Which ones build the body? Which ones maintain it? Which ones destroy it? Am I correct in presuming that unsaturated (vegetable fats) are good fats and saturated fats (animal fats) are the harmful ones?

Is protein the body builder? If so, what type of protein food is available, low or without cholesterol, which I understand is present in large quantities in milk, cheese and eggs, which are high protein foods.

Along the same line, what is the difference between processed and unprocessed foods, such as cheese and flour? And what exactly does the term mean? Ice cream, coffee, tea, salt, pepper, gelatin, sugar — do these substances have any nutritional value? Do they have any harmful effects? Are there any guidelines along which one could discover just what has gone into a product, and this way conclude for himself whether the item is beneficial or harmful? I believe my ignorance and confusion over the subject is evident. Can you inform me?

DEAR READER — The first step to knowledge is confusion. I can't answer all your questions in one column. I will say that your letter exemplifies the general confusion of the public today. I'm crusading, you might say, for increasing people's knowledge of health — the big gap is in our educational system. It does seem to me that one of the most important things a person should learn, to cope with living, is how his own body works and how to take care of it. What could be more relevant, if I may use that word? Most of our school systems have little time devoted to this most important basic knowledge. The young people are interested, too, I have learned from my mail. They are like you and can't get solid information.

The subject is large. You will need to understand how food is processed or, as you say, what does what do to what. I have written two books on these topics. Don't buy them, just go to the library and ask for "Metabolics: Putting Your Food Energy to Work" (Harper and Row, 1974) for information on processing your food, and "What You Need to Know About Food and Cooking For Health" (Viking Press, 1973) for information on food items, preparation and food values. You will find most of the questions you have raised discussed in those two books and the scientific reasons involved.

I would like to comment that, while it is generally believed that saturated fats are more likely to cause a rise in cholesterol levels, too much fat of any kind is not considered good. And, you can use fortified skim milk or low fat cottage cheese as a good source of protein without getting any significant amounts of fat or cholesterol in your diet.

Vacation savings

You can shut off the water heater when you go on vacation to save a few dollars a month. And if you turn up your refrigerator a few degrees for the time you'll be gone, you can save from $2 to $4.

3 judge panel rules to give widowers rights

NEW YORK (AP) — Widowers have the right to the same Social Security benefits as widows, a three-judge federal panel has ruled.

The decision Thursday made as many as 400,000 surviving widowers in the nation eligible for benefits for the first time. The cost to the government for the first year could be as high as $333 million, one judge estimated.

The judges threw out a previous requirement that in order to receive survivor benefits, the widower must have been receiving at least half of his support from his wife at the time of her death.

"... there is not the slightest scintilla of support for the proposition that working women are less concerned about their spouses welfare in old age than are men," the judges ruled.

Asst. U.S. Atty. Pamela McGuire said the decision would be appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The case was brought by Leon Goldfarb, 71, of Queens, who retired in July 1971 as managing analyst for the U.S. Signal Corps. As a federal employe, he paid no Social Security taxes.

Goldfarb's claim was denied when he applied for survivor's benefits following the death in 1968 of his wife Hannah, a public school teacher for 25 years.

If the court's ruling holds up under appeal, Goldfarb is expected to recover about $10,000 for a period during which he "would have been qualified to receive benefits but for the discrimination against widowers now held to be unconstitutional," the judges said.

Five similar suits are pending in Washington, New Jersey, Ohio, Florida and Maryland.

Malden -- It has been announced here that negotiations for the renewal of the contract of the Anderson Air Activities have resulted in a verbal agreement extending to June, 1956.

BICENTENNIAL FACTS

By reference to today's landmarks, New York's grid of streets extended at the time of the Revolution northward along the Hudson to just beyond the World Trade Center and eastward to about the Brooklyn Bridge. In the center was the small suburb of the Bowery. The town of "Harlan," although several miles away, had been annexed to the city in 1736. In between lay mostly farmland, The World Almanac recalls.

New help for homebuyers in understanding costs

In 400 years, the Liberty Bell has been the only bell from Whitechapel's Foundry to have cracked. The inexperience of bell ringers in the colonies was said to have caused the accident.

WASHINGTON AP-Beginning Friday, home buyers became entitled to advance notice and an explanation of the murky "closing costs" which can add thousands of dollars to the price of purchasing a home.

But paring those costs will still be up to the buyer.

New procedures mandated by the Real Estate Setlement Produres Act require lenders to provide buyers in most cases 12 days ahead of time with a list containing at least an estimated of the fees and charges to be levied when the formal purchase transaction takes place.

It's often at the final step in a home purchase, the closing or settlement, when the buyer learns for the first time of such closing costs as origination fees, escrow accounts, proprated adjustments, discount points, prepaid interest and premiums, title search costs and title insurance.

A 1972 Department of Housing and Urban development study which led to the new law found that the settlement costs levied on the buyers of $20,000-to-$24,000 homes ranged from $50 to $2,000 nationwide.

In Los Angeles County, the costs ranged from $200 to nearly $1,000, in Washington, D.C., the range was $487 to $1,030, and in Cook County, Ill., $102 to $723.

The study also found kickbacks and undisclosed commissions passed between professionals involved in a purchase transaction. In some places, buyers were required to maintain with the lender a noninterest bearing account containing at least one year's property taxes and insurance premiums. That alone could amount to $1,000 or more.

As a result of the study, HUD originally proposed to regulate the fees which could be levied on buyers using federally insured mortgages. But Congress decided instead to require the advance disclosure of the costs, while HUD studies the issue further.

The new law also provides for HUD to prepare special booklets giving the range of closing costs in specific test areas HUD officials say the agency hasn't been able to compile sound figures yet and it will be a few more months before that experiment can begin.

Although the new law still leaves buyers with responsibility for keeping their closing costs as low as possible, some new requirements are likely to hold costs down.

One provision bans outright kickbacks in the stttlement process.

Another limits the size of excrow accounts to the buyer's share of taxes and insurance preminums accured prior to settlement plus one-twelfth of the annual tax and premium bill.

Recipe is out of proporation

By RONALD REAGAN
Copley News Service

Ronald Reagan

Although parity in strategic arms has been the announced goal of the United States and Russia in their SALT (Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty) negotiations, the results of SALT II may turn out to be about as equal as horse-and-rabbit stew: one horse and one rabbit-- with the United States on the short end of the recipe.

Indications are that the negotiators are under pr ssure to come up with an agreement in time for President Ford and Soviet party boss Leonid Brezhnev to sign when the latter visits the United States in early fall. Placing a premium on speed suggests that a poor agreement is believed to be better than no agreement.

This could prove disastrous for U.S. security in the long run. And it isn't necessary.

The speed with which Congress passed the defense bill after its recent recess suggests, instead, that plenty of congressmen found the folks at home won't sit still for a weakened U.S. defense system. Against this background, the U.S. negotiating posture should be a tough one. The worry is that it won't be.

The major drawback of the proposed SALT agreement announced by Messrs. Ford and Brezhnev at Vladivostok last fall is its failure to provide for parity in missile payloads ("throw weight").

In 1972, the United States already was at a 4 to 1 disadvantage on this score.

The Soviets have since engaged in an aggressive research and development program involving five new ICBMs and a new submarine missile. If they replace their existing land-based missiles with the new models and we don't deploy a new ICBM to replace our Minuteman, the payload gap will widen to 10 to 1 in the 1980s.

The grim significance of his disparity is underscored by former Deputy Secretary of Defense Paul Nitze in a recent article in "Foreign Policy." He postulates that if the Soviets wish to destroy 1,200 fixed targets (such as our missile silos), "blanket 400 squares miles of aircraft escape area, and barrage 100 aim points at sea," they would have enough throw weight available to still keep half in reserve. In other words, first-strike capability with plenty left over.

Another threat to our military forces and our cities is posed by the Soviets' new supersonic bomber. They don't want this counted in the USSR weapons total. The U.S. negotiators seem willing to go along with this idea, despite the dangers. There may be a quid pro quo in the works, but virtually nothing is being said publicly.

Though the Vladivostok proposal calls for limiting the number of strategic weapons, it doesn't prevent them from being fitted with multiple warheads (MIRVs). This makes it all the more essential that we negotiate an agreement which provides for accurate MIRV verification and, at the same time, calls for equality of throw weight.

A cynical pal looking over the presidential timber for '76 says it looks as if the land had been pretty well cut over in years past.

Blindness ends for woman after 15 years

COFFEYVILLE, Kan. (AP) — Charlotte Sanford no longer has to place her hands upon the faces of her children to "see" what they look like.

She now knows their faces by sight because her 15 years of blindness have come to an end.

When Stephanie, her oldest daughter, was born 16 years ago, the disease which was gradually blinding Mrs. Sanford had almost finished its work. The only way she could see her baby was to hold her close to her face, almost touching nose to nose.

"Then I woke up one morning when she was 3 months old and I was totally blind," Mrs. Sanford, now 39, says.

She didn't get to see Julie, who's 15 now, or Pete, who's 4, when there were babies.

Mrs. Sanford took three times as long to cook, clean house and do other chores, but she managed to get it all done and still be active in local church functions. In 1971, when she and her husband were divorced, she took over the management of the famil's clothing store.

"When I went to market the first time, I had to feel each garment," she says. "I had to have someone explain it to me. Then I'd make a decision."

Mrs. Sanford said she hadn't been to a ophthalmologist for at least 15 years because she has been told she would never see again. In March 1974 she took Pete to the doctor because of a minor accidental eye injury.

"Pete was all right, but the doctor said he wanted to see me. 'Well, there's nothing you can do,' I told him."

Her eye problem had been diagnosed as iritis when she was 13 years old. Doctors today say she had uveittis. It's a rare, very painful inflammation of the eye. After a five-hour examination, the doctor told her he thought she had light perception in one eye.

Surgery was performed July 7, and it took four hours to remove cataracts and scar tissue from her eyes. Four days later, she put on glasses and could see.

"When can I see my children?" Mrs. Sanford asked.

She saw Stephanie first. "In those 15 years hair styles certainly changed," she recalls. The first thing she said was: "Stephanie, we're just going to have to do smething bout those bangs."

Stephanie had them cut next day. Julia brushed hers back before she came in to see her mother.

She didn't get to see Pete until a week and a half later.

"He walked in quietly and said: 'Hi, Mama.' I ststood there for 15 minutes and just gazed at him."

She has regained permanent sight in one eye but the other could not be saved.

She has sold her store and is working part-time in a music store. She also is going to school at night.

"It's realy a whole new life, and I have all these choices I never had before," she says. "It's not hard to adjust to a normal life."

Rail union agrees to postpone strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — The railway clerks union agreed early Friday to postpone its threatened nationwide strike until July 21, after all-night negotations failed to settle a contract dispute.

The union earlier had threatened to walk out at 12:01 a.m. EDT Monday.

W.J. Usery Jr., the Ford administration's top labor troubleshooter, who announced the postponement at dawn, said the union acted after he requested a 30-day delay.

No further talks were scheduled following the all-night session among Usery, the union leaders and representatives of the rail industry.

Before the talks ended, movement reportedly was made in the positions of the Brotherhood of Railway and Airline Clerks (BRAC) and the railroad industry.

During the session at a downtown hotel, Usery and George Ives, chairman of the National Mediation Board, shuttled between the meeting rooms of both sides and held occasional hallway conferences with BRAC President C.L. Dennis and William H. Dempsey, head of the National Railway Labor Conference, which represents management.

Dennis' bargaining team scaled down demands covering such areas as wages, cost-of-living adjustments, job security, and exemption of certain employes from union membership.

Dennis said later he had told the industry bargainers that if they did not accept the revised package, which he called the "bottom line," the union would revert to its previous positions.

The railway clerks have refused to go along with pattern agreements signed by seven other rail unions calling for a 41 per cent wage-and-benefit increase over three years.

New help for homebuyers in understanding costs

In 400 years, the Liberty Bell has been the only bell from Whitechapel's Foundry to have cracked. The inexperience of bell ringers in the colonies was said to have caused the accident.

WASHINGTON AP-Beginning Friday, home buyers became entitled to advance notice and an explanation of the murky "closing costs" which can add thousands of dollars to the price of purchasing a home.

But paring those costs will still be up to the buyer.

New procedures mandated by the Real Estate Setlement Produres Act require lenders to provide buyers in most cases 12 days ahead of time with a list containing at least an estimated of the fees and charges to be levied when the formal purchase transaction takes place.

It's often at the final step in a home purchase, the closing or settlement, when the buyer learns for the first time of such closing costs as origination fees, escrow accounts, proprated adjustments, discount points, prepaid interest and premiums, title search costs and title insurance.

A 1972 Department of Housing and Urban development study which led to the new law found that the settlement costs levied on the buyers of $20,000-to-$24,000 homes ranged from $50 to $2,000 nationwide.

In Los Angeles County, the costs ranged from $200 to nearly $1,000, in Washington, D.C., the range was $487 to $1,030, and in Cook County, Ill., $102 to $723.

The study also found kickbacks and undisclosed commissions passed between professionals involved in a purchase transaction. In some places, buyers were required to maintain with the lender a noninterest bearing account containing at least one year's property taxes and insurance premiums. That alone could amount to $1,000 or more.

As a result of the study, HUD originally proposed to regulate the fees which could be levied on buyers using federally insured mortgages. But Congress decided instead to require the advance disclosure of the costs, while HUD studies the issue further.

The new law also provides for HUD to prepare special booklets giving the range of closing costs in specific test areas HUD officials say the agency hasn't been able to compile sound figures yet and it will be a few more months before that experiment can begin.

Although the new law still leaves buyers with responsibility for keeping their closing costs as low as possible, some new requirements are likely to hold costs down.

One provision bans outright kickbacks in the stttlement process.

Another limits the size of excrow accounts to the buyer's share of taxes and insurance preminums accured prior to settlement plus one-twelfth of the annual tax and premium bill.

Recipe is out of proporation

By RONALD REAGAN

Although parity in strategic arms has been the announced goal of the United States and Russia in their SALT (Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty) negotiations, the results of SALT II may turn out to be about as equal as horse-and-rabbit stew: one horse and one rabbit-- with the United States on the short end of the recipe.

Indications are that the negotiators are under pr ssure to come up with an agreement in time for President Ford and Soviet party boss Leonid Brezhnev to sign when the latter visits the United States in early fall. Placing a premium on speed suggests that a poor agreement is believed to be better than no agreement.

This could prove disastrous for U.S. security in the long run. And it isn't necessary.

The speed with which Congress passed the defense bill after its recent recess suggests, instead, that plenty of congressmen found the folks at home won't sit still for a weakened U.S. defense system. Against this background, the U.S. negotiating posture should be a tough one. The worry is that it won't be.

The major drawback of the proposed SALT agreement announced by Messrs. Ford and Brezhnev at Vladivostok last fall is its failure to provide for parity in missile payloads ("throw weight").

In 1972, the United States already was at a 4 to 1 disadvantage on this score.

The Soviets have since engaged in an aggressive research and development program involving five new ICBMs and a new submarine missile. If they replace their existing land-based missiles with the new models and we don't deploy a new ICBM to replace our Minuteman, the payload gap will widen to 10 to 1 in the 1980s.

The grim significance of his disparity is underscored by former Deputy Secretary of Defense Paul Nitze in a recent article in "Foreign Policy." He postulates that if the Soviets wish to destroy 1,200 fixed targets (such as our missile silos), "blanket 400 squares miles of aircraft escape area, and barrage 100 aim points at sea," they would have enough throw weight available to still keep half in reserve. In other words, first-strike capability with plenty left over.

Another threat to our military forces and our cities is posed by the Soviets' new supersonic bomber. They don't want this counted in the USSR weapons total. The U.S. negotiators seem willing to go along with this idea, despite the dangers. There may be a quid pro quo in the works, but virtually nothing is being said publicly.

Though the Vladivostok proposal calls for limiting the number of strategic weapons, it doesn't prevent them from being fitted with multiple warheads (MIRVs). This makes it all the more essential that we negotiate an agreement which provides for accurate MIRV verification and, at the same time, calls for equality of throw weight.

Blindness ends for woman after 15 years

COFFEYVILLE, Kan. (AP) — Charlotte Sanford no longer has to place her hands upon the faces of her children to "see" what they look like.

She now knows their faces by sight because her 15 years of blindness have come to an end.

When Stephanie, her oldest daughter, was born 16 years ago, the disease which was gradually blinding Mrs. Sanford had almost finished its work. The only way she could see her baby was to hold her close to her face, almost touching nose to nose.

"Then I woke up one morning when she was 3 months old and I was totally blind," Mrs. Sanford, now 39, says.

She didn't get to see Julie, who's 15 now, or Pete, who's 4, when there were babies.

Mrs. Sanford took three times as long to cook, clean house and do other chores, but she managed to get it all done and still be active in local church functions. In 1971, when she and her husband were divorced, she took over the management of the famil's clothing store.

"When I went to market the first time, I had to feel each garment," she says. "I had to have someone explain it to me. Then I'd make a decision."

Mrs. Sanford said she hadn't been to a ophthalmologist for at least 15 years because she has been told she would never see again. In March 1974 she took Pete to the doctor because of a minor accidental eye injury.

"Pete was all right, but the doctor said he wanted to see me. 'Well, there's nothing you can do,' I told him."

Her eye problem had been diagnosed as iritis when she was 13 years old. Doctors today say she had uveittis. It's a rare, very painful inflammation of the eye. After a five-hour examination, the doctor told her he thought she had light perception in one eye.

Surgery was performed July 7, and it took four hours to remove cataracts and scar tissue from her eyes. Four days later, she put on glasses and could see.

"When can I see my children?" Mrs. Sanford asked.

She saw Stephanie first. "In those 15 years hair styles certainly changed," she recalls. The first thing she said was: "Stephanie, we're just going to have to do smething bout those bangs."

Stephanie had them cut next day. Julia brushed hers back before she came in to see her mother.

She didn't get to see Pete until a week and a half later.

"He walked in quietly and said: 'Hi, Mama.' I ststood there for 15 minutes and just gazed at him."

She has regained permanent sight in one eye but the other could not be saved.

She has sold her store and is working part-time in a music store. She also is going to school at night.

"It's realy a whole new life, and I have all these choices I never had before," she says. "It's not hard to adjust to a normal life."

Rail union agrees to postpone strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — The railway clerks union agreed early Friday to postpone its threatened nationwide strike until July 21, after all-night negotations failed to settle a contract dispute.

The union earlier had threatened to walk out at 12:01 a.m. EDT Monday.

W.J. Usery Jr., the Ford administration's top labor troubleshooter, who announced the postponement at dawn, said the union acted after he requested a 30-day delay.

No further talks were scheduled following the all-night session among Usery, the union leaders and representatives of the rail industry.

Before the talks ended, movement reportedly was made in the positions of the Brotherhood of Railway and Airline Clerks (BRAC) and the railroad industry.

During the session at a downtown hotel, Usery and George Ives, chairman of the National Mediation Board, shuttled between the meeting rooms of both sides and held occasional hallway conferences with BRAC President C.L. Dennis and William H. Dempsey, head of the National Railway Labor Conference, which represents management.

Dennis' bargaining team scaled down demands covering such areas as wages, cost-of-living adjustments, job security, and exemption of certain employes from union membership.

Dennis said later he had told the industry bargainers that if they did not accept the revised package, which he called the "bottom line," the union would revert to its previous positions.

The railway clerks have refused to go along with pattern agreements signed by seven other rail unions calling for a 41 per cent wage-and-benefit increase over three years.

Male coaches unhappy at winning female coach

DETROIT (AP) — Mary Mabry made a lot of male coaches unhappy this weekend when she proved beyond a doubt that a woman can coach a boys' track team as well as a man.

Mrs. Mabry, in her first year as head coach of the boys' track team at Inkster High, guided the squad to the state Class B high school championship at Michigan State University.

She was the only woman coach at the meet and, after it was over Saturday, only a few of the men congratulated her, she said.

"They don't want a woman to win — that's obvious," said the 33-year-old mother of five. "A lot of male coaches feel that this is not a job for a woman. They especially feel that an all-boy team should be coached by men."

Mrs. Mabry had to battle to get her job. She was turned down three times for the position because she was a woman. She was given the job this year, according to school authorities, because she was the only applicant.

"The athletic director just wasn't ready for a woman coach," she said. "Now he says I'm one of the best coaches at Inkster High.

"My boys feel that I did a wonderful job keeping the team together," she said. "They said this was the first year in the four they've been on the team that they've put out so much effort. They say it was because I was out there pushing them all the time."

Mr. and Mrs. Larry Garrett

Brown-Garrett

Miss Cindi Brown and Larry Garrett were married May 30 at the home of the bride's parents, 110 Thomas Drive. The Rev. Wade Paris officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Brown, 110 Thomas Drive, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Garrett, Route Four.

The bride wore a gown of white satin, polyester and chiffon. A high collar was edged with tiny yellow daisies as was a bib of chiffon below the collar. Chiffon sleeves were puffy at the shoulders and accented with daisies above the elbow. The waistline was tied with long streamers at the back and a wide ruffle accented the hemline. She wore in her hair a white satin bow styled with streamers and seed pearls. She carried a nosegay of spring flowers with long yellow streamers.

Mrs. Barbara Ryan, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and best man was Gary Ryan.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at the bride's home.

Mrs. Garrett is a 1974 graduate of Sikeston High School and is the night supervisor for Dimensions In Fashion.

Garrett is a 1973 graduate of Sikeston High School and attended Southeast Missouri State University at Cape Girardeau. He will attend the University of Missouri-Columbia in the fall to obtain a bachelor's degree in agriculture.

The couple lives at 337 Matthews St.

Orth-Denbow

Miss Deborah Orth and James W. Denbow were married May 25 at the North Acres General Baptist Church. The Rev. Robert Jones officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Orth of St. Louis and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Wanda Adams of Portageville and the late Rev. James E. Denbow.

The bride wore a yellow knit gown trimmed with white daisies. She carried a bouquet of white daisies and yellow roses accented with yellow ribbons.

Denise Orth of St. Louis, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Steve Alsup of Highland, Ill., was best man.

Mrs. Denbow is a graduate of Manchester Lultheran High School and is a senior at Southeast Missouri State University at Cape Girardeau.

Denbow is a 1969 graduate of Sikeston High School and served for three years in the Marine Corps. He is also a senior at SeMo State University. The couple lives in Cape Girardeau.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Britton

Smith-Britton

MOREHOUSE-Miss Louise Smith and Bill Britton were united in marriage June 7 at the Oneness Pentecost Church. The Rev. Nathaniel Lewis officated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don Smith of Gray Ridge and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Britton of Bell City.

The bride wore a gown of bridal satin and Venise lace. The bodice featured a high neckline, an empire waistline and Renaissance sleeves. Venise lace trimmed the neckline, bodice, sleeves, hemline and chapel-length train. She wore a chapel-length mantill of imported English illusion and carried a cascade of white daisies and baby's breath.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Margaret Moffit and bridesmaids were Sharon Parker and Debbie Abernathy.

Jim Britton of Morley, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Groomsmen were Tom Britton of Bell City, brother of the bridegroom, and Larry Moffit of Morehouse

Flower girls were Tonjia Smith of Essex and Marcia Cook of Fort Scott, Kansas. Ringbearer was Jay Britton of Vanduser.

Candlelighters were Glenna Smith of Essex; Allen Britton of Vanduser; and Fred Cook of Fort Scott. Ushers were Larry Moffit and Steve Hughes.

After the ceremony, a reception was held in the church fellowhip hall

Mrs. Britton is a 1969 graduate of Richland High School near Essex. She is employed in the computer department of the Bank of Sikeston.

Britton is a 1968 graduate of Bell City High School and received an associate of arts degree in political science in 1972 from Three Rivers Community College at Poplar Bluff. He is employed with Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., in Sikeston

The couple lives at 405 Greer St., Sikeston.

Mystery novel has everything

"Salt Is Leaving," a new novel by J. B. Priestley, has everything that a convincing suspense story should have: A set of rapidly changing situations, a vivid background and a cast of complex human beings, not merely characters, which only an accomplished novelist can create. Priestley has done it. His plot is increasingly surprising and toughened with one wry twist after another.

Fiction: "The Lion of Justice," by Margaret Butler; "One Way to Venice," by Jane Aiken Hodge; "Engagement," by Eloise R. Weld; "Crocodile On the Sandbank", by Elizabeth Peters and "The Medici Ring", by Nicole St. John.

Nonfiction: "Journey," by Robert Massie; "Religion 2101 A.D." by Hiley H. Ward; "The Businessman's Guide to Washington," by William Ruder "The Civil War," by Shelby Foote; "Fishing With McClane," by A. J. McClane; and "Edward VIII," by Frances Donaldson.

Household hints

To create a pickle-catsup sauce, combine one-half cup catsup, two tablespoons melted butter and one-half cup chopped pickle. Use as a colorful glaze for fish or as a sauce for omelets.

Mr. and Mrs. Terry Brase

Harwell-Brase

Miss Sheila Diane Harwell and Terry Wayne Brase exchanged marriage vows June 6 at the Tanner Street Church of God. The Rev. Vernon Gutterfelder officated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Buddy Joe Harwell, 121 W. Kathleen St., and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Brase, 601 Branum Ave.

The bride wore a dacron polyester over satin gown featuring a crescent waistline with a transparent bodice, highlighted by a wedding band neckline and bishop sleeves. The A-line skirt was attached to a brush train trimmed with Venise lace and seed pearls. A double-tiered fingertip veil of imported English silk illusion was attached to a Camelot cap of Venise lace and seed pearls.

She carried a nosegay of pastel colored daisies accented with baby's breath, colonial loace and pastel streamers.

Teresa Phillips was maid of honor and bridesmaids were Patti Harwell of Marmaduke, Ark.; Robyne Beck and Rhonda Stacy of Sikeston; and Rhonda Peters of Gray Ridge.

Paul Suver was best man. Groomsmen were Steve Brase of Jacksonville, Ark. and Rick Brase, Glen Guttenfelder and Mike Irwin of Sikeston.

Sarah Leane Harwell of Marmaduke was flower girl and Scott Brase of Sikeston was ringbearer. Candlelighters were Deena Brase of Sikeston and Eric Smith of Kennett, Charles Beck and Richard Wibbenmeyer were ushers.

After the ceremony, a reception was held in the church fellowship hall.

Mrs. Brase is a senior at Sikeston High School. She is employed at the Sikeston Convalescent Center.

Brase is a 1973 graduate of Sikeston High School and is employed with Quality Auto Parts.

The couple lives at 535 N. Ranney St.

Ann Landers

An ounce of prevention should be much better than a pound of cure

Dear Ann Landers: May I add a word of advice for both mothers and sitters -- on behalf of the child?

It can be very traumatic for a youngster to be left with a total stranger on a moment's notice. The sitter should be invited to the house as a guest to say hello a day or so before she takes on her first job with a new child.

It can be a terrifying experience for a little one to be left with a person he or she has never seen before. The sitter must then calm the child and reassure him, and this can be a difficult job.

So please, Ann, add this suggestion to your list of "helpful hints" for both mothers and sitters. -- It Happened To Me

Dear Happ: Excellent suggestion. Thank you for writing. Your letter is a good example of how an ounce of prevention can be much better than a pound of cure.

Dear Ann Landers: I am in love with a man who is 27. We became engaged a short time after we dated -- two and a half months, to be exact. We both felt we were just right for each other, so why wait? We announced our engagement last week and arrangements are being made for our wedding.

There's a problem that keeps me up nights. My fiance cannot seem to get over his former girl friend. They talk on the phone and see each other occasionally. I believe he is still in love with her. He refuses to discuss it, but I know something is there. I'm afraid I caught him on the rebound and he is too much of a gentleman to back out. How do I find out if I'm right or wrong? He's not a very good talker and I'm not a very good listener. This is a cry for help, Ann. -- Three's A Crowd

Dear C: You are obviously beset with doubts, which is no way to go into a marriage. Cancel the wedding plans at once and give your fiance his freedom. If he really loves you andnot the old flame you'll know it within a few months. It's easier, my dear, to reinstate plans for a wedding than to go through a divorce.

Dear Ann Landers: You sometimes print pet gripes which can be very useful because people learn from them. Here's mine: The Wrong Number.

I often wonder who these people are who make phone calls at 3:00 a.m. Either theyare insomniacs or folks who work nights and sleep during the day.

It so happens that my husband and I work days and we need our sleep at night. This past month we have been awakened three times between 3:00 and 4:00 a.m. by some jerk looking for "Alice." Once that phone jangles us out of a sound sleep the night is shot. It also means feeling lousy the next day. It just isn't fair.

Please, Ann, ask your readers to dial with care -- especially after midinght. It's the very least one can do for his fellow man. Thank you. -- Red-Eved This Mrning

Dear Red: Here's your letter and I hope it helps. Unfortunately, at least half of those wrong numbers (especially the jerks who are looking for "Alice") can't see the dial for the booze -- so please don't expect me to produce miracles.

A no-nonsense approach to how to deal with life's most difficult and most rewarding arrangement. Ann Landers's booklet, "Marriage -- What to Expect," will prepare you for better of for worse. Sen your request to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120, enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Male coaches unhappy at winning female coach

DETROIT (AP) — Mary Mabry made a lot of male coaches unhappy this weekend when she proved beyond a doubt that a woman can coach a boys' track team as well as a man.

Mrs. Mabry, in her first year as head coach of the boys' track team at Inkster High, guided the squad to the state Class B high school championship at Michigan State University.

She was the only woman coach at the meet and, after it was over Saturday, only a few of the men congratulated her, she said.

"They don't want a woman to win — that's obvious," said the 33-year-old mother of five. "A lot of male coaches feel that this is not a job for a woman. They especially feel that an all-boy team should be coached by men."

Mrs. Mabry had to battle to get her job. She was turned down three times for the position because she was a woman. She was given the job this year, according to school authorities, because she was the only applicant.

"The athletic director just wasn't ready for a woman coach," she said. "Now he says I'm one of the best coaches at Inkster High.

"My boys feel that I did a wonderful job keeping the team together," she said. "They said this was the first year in the four they've been on the team that they've put out so much effort. They say it was because I was out there pushing them all the time."

Couples walk down the aisle

Mr. and Mrs. Larry Garrett

Brown-Garrett

Miss Cindi Brown and Larry Garrett were married May 30 at the home of the bride's parents, 110 Thomas Drive. The Rev. Wade Paris officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Brown, 110 Thomas Drive, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Garrett, Route Four.

The bride wore a gown of white satin, polyester and chiffon. A high collar was edged with tiny yellow daisies as was a bib of chiffon below the collar. Chiffon sleeves were puffy at the shoulders and accented with daisies above the elbow. The waistline was tied with long streamers at the back and a wide ruffle accented the hemline. She wore in her hair a white satin bow styled with streamers and seed pearls. She carried a nosegay of spring flowers with long yellow streamers.

Mrs. Barbara Ryan, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and best man was Gary Ryan.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at the bride's home.

Mrs. Garrett is a 1974 graduate of Sikeston High School and is the night supervisor for Dimensions In Fashion.

Garrett is a 1973 graduate of Sikeston High School and attended Southeast Missouri State University at Cape Girardeau. He will attend the University of Missouri-Columbia in the fall to obtain a bachelor's degree in agriculture.

The couple lives at 337 Matthews St.

Orth-Denbow

Miss Deborah Orth and James W. Denbow were married May 25 at the North Acres General Baptist Church. The Rev. Robert Jones officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Orth of St. Louis and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Wanda Adams of Portageville and the late Rev. James E. Denbow.

The bride wore a yellow knit gown trimmed with white daisies. She carried a bouquet of white daisies and yellow roses accented with yellow ribbons.

Denise Orth of St. Louis, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Steve Alsup of Highland, Ill., was best man.

Mrs. Denbow is a graduate of Manchester Lultheran High School and is a senior at Southeast Missouri State University at Cape Girardeau.

Denbow is a 1969 graduate of Sikeston High School and served for three years in the Marine Corps. He is also a senior at SeMo State University. The couple lives in Cape Girardeau.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Britton

Smith-Britton

MOREHOUSE-Miss Louise Smith and Bill Britton were united in marriage June 7 at the Oneness Pentecost Church. The Rev. Nathaniel Lewis officated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don Smith of Gray Ridge and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Britton of Bell City.

The bride wore a gown of bridal satin and Venise lace. The bodice featured a high neckline, an empire waistline and Renaissance sleeves. Venise lace trimmed the neckline, bodice, sleeves, hemline and chapel-length train. She wore a chapel-length mantill of imported English illusion and carried a cascade of white daisies and baby's breath.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Margaret Moffit and bridesmaids were Sharon Parker and Debbie Abernathy.

Jim Britton of Morley, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Groomsmen were Tom Britton of Bell City, brother of the bridegroom, and Larry Moffit of Morehouse

Flower girls were Tonjia Smith of Essex and Marcia Cook of Fort Scott, Kansas. Ringbearer was Jay Britton of Vanduser.

Candlelighters were Glenna Smith of Essex; Allen Britton of Vanduser; and Fred Cook of Fort Scott. Ushers were Larry Moffit and Steve Hughes.

After the ceremony, a reception was held in the church fellowhip hall

Mrs. Britton is a 1969 graduate of Richland High School near Essex. She is employed in the computer department of the Bank of Sikeston.

Britton is a 1968 graduate of Bell City High School and received an associate of arts degree in political science in 1972 from Three Rivers Community College at Poplar Bluff. He is employed with Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., in Sikeston

The couple lives at 405 Greer St., Sikeston.

Mr. and Mrs. Terry Brase

Harwell-Brase

Miss Sheila Diane Harwell and Terry Wayne Brase exchanged marriage vows June 6 at the Tanner Street Church of God. The Rev. Vernon Gutterfelder officated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Buddy Joe Harwell, 121 W. Kathleen St., and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Brase, 601 Branum Ave.

The bride wore a dacron polyester over satin gown featuring a crescent waistline with a transparent bodice, highlighted by a wedding band neckline and bishop sleeves. The A-line skirt was attached to a brush train trimmed with Venise lace and seed pearls. A double-tiered fingertip veil of imported English silk illusion was attached to a Camelot cap of Venise lace and seed pearls.

She carried a nosegay of pastel colored daisies accented with baby's breath, colonial loace and pastel streamers.

Teresa Phillips was maid of honor and bridesmaids were Patti Harwell of Marmaduke, Ark.; Robyne Beck and Rhonda Stacy of Sikeston; and Rhonda Peters of Gray Ridge.

Paul Suver was best man. Groomsmen were Steve Brase of Jacksonville, Ark. and Rick Brase, Glen Guttenfelder and Mike Irwin of Sikeston.

Sarah Leane Harwell of Marmaduke was flower girl and Scott Brase of Sikeston was ringbearer. Candlelighters were Deena Brase of Sikeston and Eric Smith of Kennett. Charles Beck and Richard Wibbenmeyer were ushers.

After the ceremony, a reception was held in the church fellowship hall.

Mrs. Brase is a senior at Sikeston High School. She is employed at the Sikeston Convalescent Center.

Brase is a 1973 graduate of Sikeston High School and is employed with Quality Auto Parts.

The couple lives at 535 N. Ranney St.

Mystery novel has everything

"Salt Is Leaving," a new novel by J. B. Priestley, has everything that a convincing suspense story should have: A set of rapidly changing situations, a vivid background and a cast of complex human beings, not merely characters, which only an accomplished novelist can create. Priestley has done it. His plot is increasingly surprising and toughened with one wry twist after another.

Fiction: "The Lion of Justice," by Margaret Butler; "One Way to Venice," by Jane Aiken Hodge; "Engagement," by Eloise R. Weld; "Crocodile On the Sandbank", by Elizabeth Peters and "The Medici Ring", by Nicole St. John.

Ann Landers

An ounce of prevention should be much better than a pound of cure

Dear Ann Landers: May I add a word of advice for both mothers and sitters -- on behalf of the child?

It can be very traumatic for a youngster to be left with a total stranger on a moment's notice. The sitter should be invited to the house as a guest to say hello a day or so before she takes on her first job with a new child.

It can be a terrifying experience for a little one to be left with a person he or she has never seen before. The sitter must then calm the child and reassure him, and this can be a difficult job.

So please, Ann, add this suggestion to your list of "helpful hints" for both mothers and sitters. -- It Happened To Me

Dear Happ: Excellent suggestion. Thank you for writing. Your letter is a good example of how an ounce of prevention can be much better than a pound of cure.

Dear Ann Landers: I am in love with a man who is 27. We became engaged a short time after we dated -- two and a half months, to be exact. We both felt we were just right for each other, so why wait? We announced our engagement last week and arrangements are being made for our wedding.

There's a problem that keeps me up nights. My fiance cannot seem to get over his former girl friend. They talk on the phone and see each other occasionally. I believe he is still in love with her. He refuses to discuss it, but I know something is there. I'm afraid I caught him on the rebound and he is too much of a gentleman to back out. How do I find out if I'm right or wrong? He's not a very good talker and I'm not a very good listener. This is a cry for help, Ann. -- Three's A Crowd

Dear C: You are obviously beset with doubts, which is no way to go into a marriage. Cancel the wedding plans at once and give your fiance his freedom. If he really loves you andnot the old flame you'll know it within a few months. It's easier, my dear, to reinstate plans for a wedding than to go through a divorce.

Dear Ann Landers: You sometimes print pet gripes which can be very useful because people learn from them. Here's mine: The Wrong Number.

I often wonder who these people are who make phone calls at 3:00 a.m. Either they are insomniacs or folks who work nights and sleep during the day.

It so happens that my husband and I work days and we need our sleep at night. This past month we have been awakened three times between 3:00 and 4:00 a.m. by some jerk looking for "Alice." Once that phone jangles us out of a sound sleep the night is shot. It also means feeling lousy the next day. It just isn't fair.

Please, Ann, ask your readers to dial with care -- especially after midinght. It's the very least one can do for his fellow man. Thank you. -- Red-Eyed This Mrning

Dear Red: Here's your letter and I hope it helps. Unfortunately, at least half of those wrong numbers (especially the jerks who are looking for "Alice") can't see the dial for the booze -- so please don't expect me to produce miracles.

A no-nonsense approach to how to deal with life's most difficult and most rewarding arrangement. Ann Landers's booklet, "Marriage -- What to Expect," will prepare you for better of for worse. Sen your request to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120, enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

United States ability to supply overseas customers stressed

HUDSON, Iowa–The ability of the United States to provide a steady supply of soybeans for overseas customers will be stressed to members of a team of Austrian animal nutritionists who will visit this country during the latter half of June.

The study trip, arranged by the American Soybean Association (ASA) in cooperation with the USDA Foreign Agricultural Service, will also focus on the improvement of livestock and poultry production through the use of modern soybean meal-based rations, according to Dr. Keith Smith, ASA animal nutritionist.

Smith explained that Austria relied heavily upon soybean imports from the United States prior to the July 1973 export embargo on soybeans, but that the embargo prompted the Austrian government to look elsewhere for the country's oilseed needs.

"We hope to convince these men that the embargo was mistake our government will not repeat and that the United States can product an ample supply of soybeans for both domestic and foreign customers," said Smith.

The team includes an official of the Austrian Ministry of Agriculture, a college agriculture professor and two officials of a major mixed feed producing firm.

In the Amarillo, Tex., area, they will review cattle feeding on the High Plains and visit Producers Grain Corporation. In the Plainview area, they will visit the Jimmy Dean Sausage Plant, confinement swine operations and the farm of ASA President, W.B. Tilson. They will also meet with members of the animal science department at Texas Technological University in Lubbock.

In the Fayetteville, Ark., area, the team will visit with researchers at the University of Arkansas and view Tyson livestock and poultry operations and the Cargill turkey processing plant.

They will visit the Ralston Purina offices and agricultural research farm in St. Louis.

The team's visit to Illinois will include stps at ADM Miling Co. in Decatur, the University of Illinois, the Chicago Board of Trade and Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Early Milkers Not Productive

Cows of the Colonial farmer were a far cry from the prolific milk producers which are found on today's modern dairy farms.

Milk yields were extremely low. Israel Acrelius, a farmer and writer of the time, reported in 1759, "Where the pasture is fair, a cow does not give less than two quarts of milk at a time - that is, twice a day." Cows today commonly produce 25 quarts a day. And it's not unusual for a cow to produce 50 quarts in a day and some exceptional animals have produced 75 and more quarts in a single day.

For weed control in cotton

Specialist recommends several herbicides

BLOOMFIELD--Several herbicides are recommended by the University of Missouri College of Agriculture for use as directed, postemergence weed control treatments in cotton from now until lay-by-time. These treatments and pertinent information pertaining to each are outlined below.

Fluometuron (Cotoran) plus a surfactant may be applied as a directed spray from the time cotton is there inches tall until it is laid by. It will give fair control of most common grasses and broadleaf weeds less than two inches tall. Not more than four pounds of actual flometuron should be applied to cotton in any one year, and it should not be applied withn 60 days of harvest.

DSMA or MSMA plus a surfactant may be applied as a directed spray from the time cotton is three inches tall until the first bloom appears. Either chemical will control most annual grasses, seedling cockleburs, and some other broadleaf weeds including pigweed, ragweed and jimsonweed. Best results from the use of these herbicides are obtained during dry weather when daytime air temperatures aare above 80 degrees F. Topical applications ("over the top") made near the time of blooming or more than two applications can delay cotton maturity and reduce yield. The burning effect on cotton leaves is usually more serious with MSMA than DSMA.

Flometuron (Cotoran) plus DSMA or MSMA plus a surfactant will give better control of most grasses and broadleaf weeds less than two inches tall than will either chemical used alone as a postemergence, directed spray. Follow the same precautions suggested for Flometuron, DSMA OF MSMA.

Diuron (Karmex) plus a surfactant may be used as a directed spray from the time cotton is six inches tall until it is laid by. This herbicide will give good control of most grasses including crabgrass, the foxtails, goosegrass, harnyardgrass, and nutgrass and most broadleaved weeds including cocklebur, morning glory, jimsonweed, pigweed, ragweed, and teaweed. For best results, this chemical should be used when temperatures and soil moisture conditions are conductive to good plant growth and weeds are less than three inches tall.

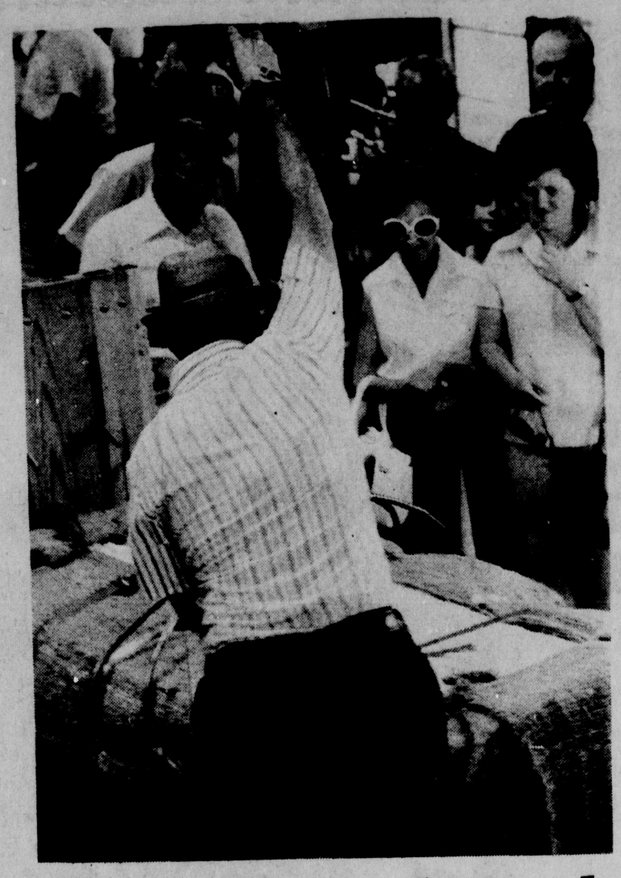
Diuron (Karmex) plus DSMA or MSMA plus a surfactant will provide better control of most grasses and broadleaf weeds two to four inches tall than will either chemical ued alone. Follow the same precuations sugested for Diuron, DSMA, or MSMA.

Prometyrne (Caparol) plus DSMA or MSMA, or MSMA.

Prometyrne (Caparol) plus DSMA or MSMA plus a surfactant can be used as a directed spray from the time cotton is three inches tall until first bloom. It should be applied in the same manner as the Diuron plus DSMA or MSMA plus surfactant treatment and will give results similar to those obtained from the use of this combination. Best results are obtained when air temperatures are 80 degrees F. or higher. Not more than two applications should be made before cotton blooms.

Of course, the best weed control treatment to apply will depend upon the specific weed problem in each field. The kinds of weeds that can be controlled by each of the previously-mentioned herbicides or herbicide combinations may be dtermined from a guide sheet entitled Herbicide Response of Common Weeds which is available from your County University of Missouri Extension Center.

Other information pertaining to these herbicides and herbicidecombinationsincluding the rate of applications for each may also be obtained from this source.



Cotton being hoisted

Plant manager Dick Edwards, back to camera, demonstrates the process of hoisting a 500-pound bale of cotton Friday to between 125 and 150 members of the Missouri Society of Farm Managers and Rural Appraisers at Matthews Cotton Co. Inc. in Matthews. Edwards said the facility is capable of baling between 250 and 300 bales during periods of full production. The group also toured other area agricultural concerns during the two-day gatherings. (Daily Standard photos)

More farmers double cropping

COLUMBIA-More and more Missouri farmers are going to double cropping of wheat and sybeans--despite the risks. And scientist here are working hard to help beat the odds.

"You know there is going to be progress in research when you're dealing with something as important as this to farmers," said William Murphy University of Missouri-Columbia Extension agronomist who will report on double cropping at Agronomy Day June 12.

"I just can't say when it will happen, but I'm sure we'll get the management practices that will make double cropping more feasible in the northern part of the state.

Murphy said that about 90-95 per cent of the Bootheel's wheat acreage is double cropped to soybeans, but the system is "marginal" as you move from mid-Missouri northward.

"For one thing, there has to be enough moisture in the soil to germinate soybeans," he noted. "if you don't have enough moisture, it is better to gorget soybean planting because of the high risk of crop failure.

Murphy noted that incorporating wheat stubble into the soil by plowing or heavy disking often dries the soil enough to inhibit germination.

"It has become a common farm practice to burn the stubble so only light disking is needed for seedbed preparation, allowing for quicker seeding and less soil moisture loss," he said.

Farmers are also going to early wheat harvest and drying the crop to permit a 5- to 7- day speed-up in planting their soybeans.

"Wheat can be harvested without damage or loss up to 22 per cent moisture content," said Murphy. "The extra drying cost will be more than paid for the less risk and improved yields of the soybeans."

Murphy added that no-till planting in the wheat stubble "limits soil moisture loss, saves time and labor, and gives good stands when there is enough soil moisture of germination. The big problem with this type of operation is obtaining week control in the soybeans so the no-till practice should be limited to fields with low week pressure."

The University of Missouri's double cropping research is aimed at developing methods for no-till planting of soybeans in the wheat before ripening. "But before definite recommedations can be made," said Murphy, "more needs to be known about the amount of damage to the wheat crop, the effect on the soybean crop, different planting times, and related week control problems.

FDA says, copper salts for poultry is wasteful

COLUMBIA--"Supplementing poultry rations with high levels of copper salts is a wasteful way to get increased weight gain in broilder chickens," a Food and Drug Administration (FDA) scientist said here June 12.

"In fact, too much copper added to broiler diets can depress normal growth and produce excess copper residues in liver tissue," Dr. Micheal Norvell reported at the 9th annual conference on Trace Substances in Environmental Health at the University of Missouri-Columbia.

Norvell discussed some of his recent work in which graded levels of various copper salts were fed to market term broilder chickens. The idea was to determine the effects on growth and the acculation of copper residues in liver and muscle tissues.

In his studies, Norvell fed copper at levels of up to three times the level normally supplemented to provide for a safety factor in studying the effects of excess copper. The higher supplementation was also used to compensate for occasoional human error resulting in the addition of too much copper to poultry diets.

At the higher copper levels, growth depression and excess liver copper residues (20 to 30 times normal) occurred when copper was fed as the sulfate, chloride or acetate salts. These effects were absent when comparable levels of coppper were fed as the oxide salt.

Copper residues were also increased in the muscle tissue of birds fed the acetate, chloride and sulfate salts, but the increase in mucle copper residues was much less than that occuring in the liver.

Agricultural cencus lagging

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new agricultural census is still lagging but federal officials say they hope to wind it up by July 31, a month later than originally scheduled.

As of June 10, the Bureau of the Census said Thursday, about 76 per cent of the four million questionnaires mailed to farmers, landowners and others earlier this year had been filled in and returned.

Originally the bureau had set June 30 for cutting off the mailin returns, but officials said another month will be taken in hopes of encouraging more people to complete the questionnaires. Federal law requires the forms to be completed and returned to the government.

The farm census, taken every five years on a county-by-county basis, relates to 1974 farm operations. The mail method was initiated in 1970 for 1969 farm operations and was conducted along with a regular 10year census enumeration for all Americans.

J. Thomas Breen, chief of the bureau's agricultural census division, told a reporter he thought that if the follow-up work is successful through July the final tally might show about 95 per cent returns of the forms, about equal to the 1970 rate.

Unofficially, Breen said, additional returns since June 10 have boosted the tally to about 83 per cent of the forms originally mailed. A special effort has been made, including personal telephone contact, to get responses from larger farm operators.

Although the additional month for getting more forms to be returned may delay the timetable somewhat, Breen said the plan remains to being releasing the new census data in November. States which have responded best will be reported on first, he said.

Based on the June 10 tabulations, North Carolina residents had returned 82 per cent of 203,654 census forms mailed to them, matched by 82 per cent of West Virginia's 52,839 forms sent there, the bureau said.

At the lower end of the scale, only 66 per of 115,270 census forms mailed to Georgia people had been returned, equaled by 66 per cent of 67,797 sent to Louisiana.

Census completion as of June 10 for some of the other more populated farm states included: Illinois 78 per cent of 180,334 mailed; Indiana 79 of 139,819; Iowa 78 of 181,333; Kansas 76 of 115,671; Kentucky 77 of 176,266; Michigan 79 of 132,865; Minnesota 71 of 156,828; Missouri 78 of 200,181; Ohio 79 of 147,348; Oklahoma 74 of 115,764; Tennessee 78 of 181,315; Texas 75 of 323,706; and Wisconsin 80 of 134,686.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cattle prices continued to edge higher last week and by mid-June were at their highest level in nearly two years at major slaughter markets.

For the week ended June 15, the Agriculture Department said Thursday, choice-grade steers at Omaha averaged $52.10 per 100 pounds, up from $51.15 the previous week and from $34.45 a year earlier.

"Slaughter steer and heifer prices received another advance even though the dressed meat market was much less vigorous than in the past few weeks," the department's Agricultural Marketing Service said.

"Demand continued to settle on choice steers over 1,100 pounds and heifers over 950 pounds as the supply of well-finished cattle remains relatively small."

Hogs also continued up, with the seven major slaughter markets averaged $47.89 per 100 pounds last week, compared with $46.70 the previous week and $23.32 a year earlier.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says that world food production continues to show promise that it will rise this year from weather-reduced harvests in 1974.

"In North America, plantings, although delayed in spots, appeared to be advancing well and crops were generally in good shape" by early June, the department's Outlook and Situation Board said Thursday. "The same was true in most of Europe. In the USSR, however, the weather has been mostly warm and dry in many important agricultural areas and some shortfall from planned grain production is expected."

Officials said that the favorable crop outlook "will put downward pressure on prices" of commodities despite the short supplies of grain from previous crops.

For weed control in cotton

Specialist recommends several herbicides

BLOOMFIELD--Several herbicides are recommended by the University of Missouri College of Agriculture for use as directed, postemergence weed control treatments in cotton from now until lay-by-time. These treatments and pertinent information pertaining to each are outlined below.

Fluometuron (Cotoran) plus a surfactant may be applied as a directed spray from the time cotton is there inches tall until it is laid by. It will give fair control of most common grasses and broadleaf weeds less than two inches tall. Not more than four pounds of actual flometuron should be applied to cotton in any one year, and it should not be applied withn 60 days of harvest.

DSMA or MSMA plus a surfactant may be applied as a directed spray from the time cotton is three inches tall until the first bloom appears. Either chemical will control most annual grasses, seedling cockleburs, and some other broadleaf weeds including pigweed, ragweed and jimsonweed. Best results from the use of these herbicides are obtained during dry weather when daytime air temperatures aare above 80 degrees F. Topical applications ("over the top") made near the time of blooming or more than two applications can delay cotton maturity and reduce yield. The burning effect on cotton leaves is usually more serious with MSMA than DSMA.

Flometuron (Cotoran) plus DSMA or MSMA plus a surfactant will give better control of most grasses and broadleaf weeds less than two inches tall than will either chemical used alone as a postemergence, directed spray. Follow the same precautions suggested for Flometuron, DSMA OF MSMA.

Diuron (Karmex) plus a surfactant may be used as a directed spray from the time cotton is six inches tall until it is laid by. This herbicide will give good control of most grasses including crabgrass, the foxtails, goosegrass, barnyardgrass, and nutgrass and most broadleaved weeds including cocklebur, morning glory, jimsonweed, pigweed, ragweed, and teaweed. For best results, this chemical should be used when temperatures and soil moisture conditions are conductive to good plant growth and weeds are less than three inches tall.

Diuron (Karmex) plus DSMA or MSMA plus a surfactant will provide better control of most grasses and broadleaf weeds two to four inches tall than will either chemical ued alone. Follow the same precuations sugested for Diuron, DSMA, or MSMA.

Prometyrne (Caparol) plus DSMA or MSMA, or MSMA.

Prometyrne (Caparol) plus DSMA or MSMA plus a surfactant can be used as a directed spray from the time cotton is three inches tall until first bloom. It should be applied in the same manner as the Diuron plus DSMA or MSMA plus surfactant treatment and will give results similar to those obtained from the use of this combination. Best results are obtained when air temperatures are 80 degrees F. or higher. Not more than two applications should be made before cotton blooms.

Of course, the best weed control treatment to apply will depend upon the specific weed problem in each field. The kinds of weeds that can be controlled by each of the previously-mentioned herbicides or herbicide combinations may be dtermined from a guide sheet entitled Herbicide Response of Common Weeds which is available from your County University of Missouri Extension Center.

Other information pertaining to these herbicides and herbicidecombinationsincluding the rate of applications for each may also be obtained from this source.

Cotton being hoisted

Plant manager Dick Edwards, back to camera, demonstrates the process of hoisting a 500-pound bale of cotton Friday to between 125 and 150 members of the Missouri Society of Farm Managers and Rural Appraisers at Matthews Cotton Co. Inc. in Matthews. Edwards said the facility is capable of baling between 250 and 300 bales during periods of full production. The group also toured other area agricultural concerns during the two-day gatherings. (Daily Standard photos)

FDA says, copper salts for poultry is wasteful

COLUMBIA--"Supplementing poultry rations with high levels of copper salts is a wasteful way to get increased weight gain in broilder chickens," a Food and Drug Administration (FDA) scientist said here June 12.

"In fact, too much copper added to broiler diets can depress normal growth and produce excess copper residues in liver tissue," Dr. Micheal Norvell reported at the 9th annual conference on Trace Substances in Environmental Health at the University of Missouri-Columbia.

Norvell discussed some of his recent work in which graded levels of various copper salts were fed to market term broilder chickens. The idea was to determine the effects on growth and the acculation of copper residues in liver and muscle tissues.

In his studies, Norvell fed copper at levels of up to three times the level normally supplemented to provide for a safety factor in studying the effects of excess copper. The higher supplementation was also used to compensate for occasoional human error resulting in the addition of too much copper to poultry diets.

At the higher copper levels, growth depression and excess liver copper residues (20 to 30 times normal) occurred when copper was fed as the sulfate, chloride or acetate salts. These effects were absent when comparable levels of coppper were fed as the oxide salt.

Copper residues were also increased in the muscle tissue of birds fed the acetate, chloride and sulfate salts, but the increase in mucle copper residues was much less than that occuring in the liver.

Agricultural cencus lagging

More farmers double cropping

COLUMBIA-More and more Missouri farmers are going to double cropping of wheat and sybeans--despite the risks. And scientist here are working hard to help beat the odds.

"You know there is going to be progress in research when you're dealing with something as important as this to farmers," said William Murphy University of Missouri-Columbia Extension agronomist who will report on double cropping at Agronomy Day June 12.

"I just can't say when it will happen, but I'm sure we'll get the management practices that will make double cropping more feasible in the northern part of the state.

Murphy said that about 90-95 per cent of the Bootheel's wheat acreage is double cropped to soybeans, but the system is "marginal" as you move from mid-Missouri northward.

"For one thing, there has to be enough moisture in the soil to germinate soybeans," he noted. "if you don't have enough moisture, it is better to gorget soybean planting because of the high risk of crop failure.

Murphy noted that incorporating wheat stubble into the soil by plowing or heavy disking often dries the soil enough to inhibit germination.

"It has become a common farm practice to burn the stubble so only light disking is needed for seedbed preparation, allowing for quicker seeding and less soil moisture loss," he said.

Farmers are also going to early wheat harvest and drying the crop to permit a 5- to 7- day speed-up in planting their soybeans.

"Wheat can be harvested without damage or loss up to 22 per cent moisture content," said Murphy. "The extra drying cost will be more than paid for the less risk and improved yields of the soybeans."

Murphy added that no-till planting in the wheat stubble "limits soil moisture loss, saves time and labor, and gives good stands when there is enough soil moisture of germination. The big problem with this type of operation is obtaining week control in the soybeans so the no-till practice should be limited to fields with low week pressure."

The University of Missouri's double cropping research is aimed at developing methods for no-till planting of soybeans in the wheat before ripening. "But before definite recommedations can be made," said Murphy, "more needs to be known about the amount of damage to the wheat crop, the effect on the soybean crop, different planting times, and related week control problems.

Brock pounds out 3 doubles

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Lou Brock pounded three doubles, stole his 22nd base and scored three runs to help the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Chicago Cubs 8-3 Friday night.

The 36-year-old Brock, the majors' second all-time leading base-stealer, contributed to St. Louis scoring bursts in the first, third and fifth innings that pinned the loss on left-hander Geoff Zahn, 2-4.

Also contributing to an extra-base St. Louis assault was Bob Forsch, 7-5, who tripled to start a three-run rally in the third.

Brock's first run staked St. Louis to a 1-0 lead, which was offset by Jerry Morales' fifth home run before the Cards pulled away. Morales also singled for a run in the sixth and Pete LaCock homered in the ninth for the Cubs.

Following the Forsch hit, Brock singled to snap a 1-1 tie and a two-out error enabled Brock to score ahead of Reggie Smith's rally-capping triple.

Leible blanks Security 4-0

Leible Implement blanked Security National Bank 4-0 in Sikeston Senior Babe Ruth League. The other game was won by the Elks due to the forfeit of the Optimists.

The winning pitcher was Dennis Cobb who fanned a total of seven and walked one batter. Larry Jackson, the losing pitcher, fanned five and walked four. The only run scoring came when Leible racked up four in the sixth inning for their total endeavor.

Security fared better in the hitting field than in scoring with a total of six, which was one more than Leible. The leading hitters for Security were Hamra, Chappell, Standridge, Crites, and Myrick who all had one hit apiece. The leading hit smashers for Leible included Hampton, Schatzley, Cobb, and Davidson all with one hit apiece. Montgomery and Shell each made a double for their respective teams.

The run scorers were Leible, Bobb, Watkins, and Lambert who all made one run each for Leible Implement.

Vanduser wins

Vanduser edged Kelso 4-3 in Semo Softball League action Friday night. The win gives Vanduser an 18-8 season record. Gary Owens was the winning pitcher and Tom Russell the losing pitcher.

Farenberg doubled home two runs in the first to put Vanduser ahead 2-0 in the first inning. Reinatel of Kelso doubled home three runs in the third inning. In the fourth inning, Farenberg singled, and then "Shotgun" Abner doubled home to tie the game up at 3-3. Norman Morgan then doubled home what proved to be the winning run in the fourth, as there was no scoring after that for the rest of the game.

Vanduser's next game is scheduled for Wednesday night when they battle the New Hamburg Falstaffs at New Hamburg.

Burger King helps leagues

The Sikeston Little League, Junior and Senior Babe Ruth leagues fund-raising program finished a smashing success, with a $4,477 total donation from its sponsor, Sikeston's Burker King Restaurant.

In this program, Sikeston's residents and merchants purchased "Have It Your Way" Delicious Dollars for $1.00 each from league players. The Delicious Dollar is worth $1.00 at Sikeston's Burger King Restaurant. Fifty cents (50 cents) of each 8,954 Delicious Dollars sold made up the $4,477.00 donation.

Ron Kruep, Sales Director for Drury Industries, Inc., franchise of Sikeston's Burger King Restaurant, presented the donation checks totaling $4,477.00 to:

Mike Foster - Little League - $3,734.25
Keith Bess - Junior Babe Ruth - $531.00
Bob Taylor - Senior Babe Ruth - $211.75

The checks were presented Thursday afternoon at Sikeston's Burger King Restaurant.

The program included several incentive prizes for the league players. The Grand Prize was an all expense paid trip to see the St. Louis Cardinals vs Houston Astros in St. Louis this past Sunday, June 15. The trip was won and attended by Manager Jim Alford's "Malone & Hyde" team and Manager Steve Weatherford's "Bank of Sikeston" team. $25.00 Gift Certificates were won by Mike Arnold, Ed Wason and Gary Silverthorn for high Delicious Dollar sales in their age groups. In addition, some 245 boys won a free dinner on Sikeston's Burger King Restaurant (Whopper, Fries, Coke).

Ron Kruep said "... This fund-raising program was a success due to the hard work of the kids and their team managers."

This same fund-raising program was run by Drury Industries' Burger King Restaurants in Cape Girardeau, Mo., Carbondale, Il, and Bowling Green, Ky. Ron Kruep announced that total donations to all communities amounted to $20,425.50 to help the local kids play ball.

Ron Kruep, Sales Director for Drury Industries of Cape Girardeau, franchise for our local Burger King Restaurant, announced that the "Have It Your Way" Delicious Dollar program provided $20,425.50 in donations to local youth baseball programs in four communities.

The program was run with success in the following communities:

Cape Girardeau	$7,155.00
Sikeston, Mo.	4,477.00
Carbondale, Il	4,391.00
Bowling Green, Ky	4,402.50
TOTAL	20,425.50

In this program local residents and merchants purchased "Have It Your Way" Delicious Dollars for $1.00 each. The Delicious Dollar is worth a full $1.00 at the local Burger King Restaurant. Fifty cents (50 cents) each 40,851 Delicious Dollars sold made up the total donations of $20,425 50.

Kruep said the fund-raising program was initiated to express Drury Industries' interest in the local community and to help the local kids play ball. Kruep also added "We at Drury Industries hope to continue this type of program for several years to come."

FISHING REPORT: Fair statewide

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri fishermen should expect only fair success this weekend, according to the Missouri Department of Conservation.

Northern and western streams are dingy to muddy, while water temperatures range in the high 70's.

Here are the conditions as reported by the department:

STREAMS

Grand: Upper is muddy and high level with fishing poor to fair. Lower is dingy and normal level with channel cat fair to good on set-lines and carp and flat head fair to good.

Chariton: Dingy and normal level with channel cat, carp and flat head fair to good.

Mississippi: Upper is dingy and normal level with catfish good and non-game fish good on set-lines. Lower is dingy and normal level with fishing fair to good.

Missouri: Upper is muddy and high with fishing poor. Middle is muddy and high with rough fish fair to set-lines. Lower is muddy and high with set-lines and non-game fish fair.

Salt: Muddy and high with fishing poor.

Pomme De Terre: Upper is muddy and high with all species poor. Lower is dingy and normal with bass, bluegill and channel cat fair.

Osage: Above lake is muddy and high with channel cat and carp fair and all others poor. Below Bagnell Dam is dingy and high with crappie fair and channel cat and white bass fair to good.

Gasconade: Muddy and high with fishing poor.

Big Niangua: Muddy and high with fishing poor to fair.

Meramec: Clear and low with bass and channel cat fair.

Big River: Off-color and low with all species fair.

Big Pieny: Clear and normal level with fishing fair.

Current: Clear and normal with fishing fair to good.

Eleven Point: Clear and normal level with trout fair to good and other species fair.

Jacks Fork: Clear and normal level with fishing fair.

Black: Upper is clear and low with fishing fair. Lower is clear and normal level with bass and bluegill fair and catfish fair on set-lines.

St. Francis: Clear and normal level with bluegill, bass and drum fair.

James: Dingy and high with fishing poor.

LAKES

Bull Shoals: Thedosia Arm is clear with black bass and crappie good. Forsyth Arm is clear and normal level with catfish, drum, black bass and white bass fair.

Taneycomo: Clear and low with trout fair and bluegill good on the lower stretches.

Table Rock: Clear and normal level with black bass fair to good and bluegill good.

Clearwater: Clear and normal level with black bass good and other species fair.

Wappapello: Clear and normal level with crappie and black bass fair and channel cat fair to good on troutlines and bluegill good.

Norfolk: Clear and normal with black bass and catfish good.

Pomme De Terre: Dingy and high with bass, crappie and channel cat fair and bluegill and carp good.

Lake of the Ozarks: Upper portion of all arms muddy, mid-sections dingy and lower end clear and high with crappie, black bass and white bass fair.

Stockton: Clear at lower end and dingy upper end with normal level and bluegill and carp fair.

Pony Express: Dingy and high with crappie poor and bluegill, channel cat and bass fair.

Jacomo: Dingy and normal level with bass and crappie fair and channel cat and bluegill good.

Blind Pony: Clear and sightly low with channel cat, bass and bluegill good.

DO TIRE BARRIERS CONTROL SHORE EROSION?

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Two grants from Goodyear of $2,500 each have been made to the universities of Michigan and Rhode Island to evaluate the use of huge tire barriers to control shore erosion from storm waves along the shores of Lake Michigan and Narrangansett and Chesapeake Bays.

The program is part of a major tire industry effort — including highway crash barriers, artificial tire reefs and recycling of old tires into new — to re-use the 200 million tires scrapped by American motorists each year.

Triangle, Barkett's, Sikeston Motor, post wins

The Minor Division of the Women's Softball League played three make-up games Thursday night. The games were scheduled to be played June 5 but were rained out. Simpson and Crugnale lead Triangle Industries to a 13-6 win over Marks Food Mart, with each making a double. Barkett's Big Star defeated Bridger 17-13 in another league game. It was Sikeston Motor Co. winning over Bank of Sikeston 18-12 in the only other division game.

Crugnale, Duncan, and Tanner each scored two runs each to help pace their 13-6 victory over Marks. Springs of the Triangle team was the only one of the two teams to get more than one hit with a total of two.

S. Bond and H. McFarland both of Bridger belted doubles in the fourth and third innings respectively. Barkett's scored and won the game 17-13 without connecting for a single hit. Bridger knocked a total of fourteen hits in making their runs.

Cindy Ross of Bank of Sikeston made the only homerun of the game plus a double. T. Johnson also of the Bank team had a triple. R. Northcutt of Sikeston Motor caught a total of five fly balls as a shortstop, three of them came in the fifth inning.

Brock pounds out 3 doubles

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Lou Brock pounded three doubles, stole his 22nd base and scored three runs to help the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Chicago Cubs 8-3 Friday night.

The 36-year-old Brock, the majors' second all-time leading base-stealer, contributed to St. Louis scoring bursts in the first, third and fifth innings that pinned the loss on left-hander Geoff Zahn, 2-4.

Also contributing to an extra-base St. Louis assault was Bob Forsch, 7-5, who tripled to start a three-run rally in the third.

Brock's first run staked St. Louis to a 1-0 lead, which was offset by Jerry Morales' fifth home run before the Cards pulled away. Morales also singled for a run in the sixth and Pete LaCock homered in the ninth for the Cubs.

Following the Forsch hit, Brock singled to snap a 1-1 tie and a two-out error enabled Brock to score ahead of Reggie Smith's rally-capping triple.

Leible blanks Security 4-0

Leible Implement blanked Security National Bank 4-0 in Sikeston Senior Babe Ruth League. The other game was won by the Elks due to the forfeit of the Optimists.

The winning pitcher was Dennis Cobb who fanned a total of seven and walked one batter. Larry Jackson, the losing pitcher, fanned five and walked four. The only run scoring came when Leible racked up four in the sixth inning for their total endeavor.

Security fared better in the hitting field than in scoring with a total of six, which was one more than Leible. The leading hitters for Security were Hamra, Chappell, Standridge, Crites, and Myrick who all had one hit apiece. The leading hit smashers for Leible included Hampton, Schatzley, Cobb, and Davidson all with one hit apiece. Montgomery and Shell each made a double for their respective teams.

The run scorers were Leible, Bobb, Watkins, and Lambert who all made one run each for Leible Implement.

Vanduser wins

Vanduser edged Kelso 4-3 in Semo Softball League action Friday night. The win gives Vanduser an 18-8 season record. Gary Owens was the winning pitcher and Tom Russell the losing pitcher.

Farenberg doubled home two runs in the first to put Vanduser ahead 2-0 in the first inning. Reinatel of Kelso doubled home three runs in the third inning. In the fourth inning, Farenberg singled, and then "Shotgun" Abner doubled home to tie the game up at 3-3. Norman Morgan then doubled home what proved to be the winning run in the fourth, as there was no scoring after that for the rest of the game.

Vanduser's next game is scheduled for Wednesday night when they battle the New Hamburg Falstaffs at New Hamburg.

Burger King helps leagues

The Sikeston Little League, Junior and Senior Babe Ruth leagues fund-raising program finished a smashing success, with a $4,477 total donation from its sponsor, Sikeston's Burker King Restaurant.

In this program, Sikeston's residents and merchants purchased "Have It Your Way" Delicious Dollars for $1.00 each from league players. The Delicious Dollar is worth $1.00 at Sikeston's Burger King Restaurant. Fifty cents (50 cents) of each 8,954 Delicious Dollars sold made up the $4,477.00 donation.

Ron Kruep, Sales Director for Drury Industries, Inc., franchise of Sikeston's Burger King Restaurant, presented the donation checks totaling $4,477.00 to:

Mike Foster - Little League - $3,734.25
Keith Bess - Junior Babe Ruth - $531.00
Bob Taylor - Senior Babe Ruth - $211.75

The checks were presented Thursday afternoon at Sikeston's Burger King Restaurant.

The program included several incentive prizes for the league players. The Grand Prize was an all expense paid trip to see the St. Louis Cardinals vs Houston Astros in St. Louis this past Sunday, June 15. The trip was won and attended by Manager Jim Alford's "Malone & Hyde" team and Manager Steve Weatherford's "Bank of Sikeston" team. $25.00 Gift Certificates were won by Mike Arnold, Ed Wason and Gary Silverthorn for high Delicious Dollar sales in their age groups. In addition, some 245 boys won a free dinner on Sikeston's Burger King Restaurant (Whopper, Fries, Coke).

Ron Kruep said "... This fund-raising program was a success due to the hard work of the kids and their team managers."

This same fund-raising program was run by Drury Industries' Burger King Restaurants in Cape Girardeau, Mo., Carbondale, Il, and Bowling Green, Ky. Ron Kruep announced that total donations to all communities amounted to $20,425.50 to help the local kids play ball.

Ron Kruep, Sales Director for Drury Industries of Cape Girardeau, franchise for our local Burger King Restaurant, announced that the "Have It Your Way" Delicious Dollar program provided $20,425.50 in donations to local youth baseball programs in four communities.

The program was run with success in the following communities:

Cape Girardeau	$7,155.00
Sikeston, Mo.	4,477.00
Carbondale, Il	4,391.00
Bowling Green, Ky	4,402.50
TOTAL	20,425.50

In this program local residents and merchants purchased "Have It Your Way" Delicious Dollars for $1.00 each. The Delicious Dollar is worth a full $1.00 at the local Burger King Restaurant. Fifty cents (50 cents) each 40,851 Delicious Dollars sold made up the total donations of $20,425.50.

Kruep said the fund-raising program was initiated to express Drury Industries' interest in the local community and to help the local kids play ball. Kruep also added "We at Drury Industries hope to continue this type of program for several years to come."

THE RYATTS By Jack Elrod

Today in U.S. History

By The Associated Press

Today is Saturday, June 21, the 172th day of 1975. There are 193 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1788, the United States Constitution went into effect as New Hampshire became the ninth state to ratify it.

On this date —

In 1834, the American inventor, Cyrus McCormick, was granted a patent on his reaping machine.

In 1898, the first U.S. troops landed in Cuba in the Spanish-American War.

In 1919, part of a German fleet interned at Scapa Flow in Scotland was scuttled by the German crewmen.

In 1942, in World War 2, 30,000 British soldiers were taken prisoner as the stronghold of Tobruk in Libya fell to the Germans.

In 1945, Japanese forces on the island of Okinawa surrendered to the Americans.

In 1963, the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Milan, Italy, was elected Pope. He took the name Paul VI.

Ten years ago: Houari Boumedienne was trying to organize a new government in Algeria after ousting and arresting Prsident Ahmed Ben Bella.

Five years ago: The Indochina war erupted on a dozen fronts in the heaviest fighting since the Vietnamese conflict had spread to Cambodia in April.

One year ago: Former presidential aide Charles Colson was sentenced by a federal judge in Washington to one to three years in prison after pleading guilty to obstruction of justice in the Watergate scandal.

Today's birthday's: Actress Jane Russell is 54 years old. Opera singer Judith Raskin is 47.

Thought for today: Only the young die good. — Oliver Herford, English writer, 1863-1935.

PEOPLE... IN THE NEWS

4-H Donors

Chicago, Ill. – Four donors of 4-H college scholarships have boosted their grants to the $1,000 level this year. This brings to seven the total number of businesses, corporations, and foundations offering $1,000 awards in 1975.

For the first time total scholarship funding through the National 4-H Service Committee will top $200,000. Nearly 60 donors have pledged $205,000, an increase of 13 per cent over the 1974 total of $181,000.

More than 250 scholarships will be awarded to deserving 4-H'ers in 1975. Many of these grants will be presented during the 54th National 4-H Congress to be held here Nov. 30 - Dec. 4.

Donors who increased their scholarship awards from $700 to $1,000 are: The Firestone Tire & Rubber Company, sponsor of the 4-H automotive program, eight awards; John Deere, sponsor of the conservation of natural resources program, six awards; Carnation Company, sponsor of the dairy foods program, six awards; and Tupperware Home Parties, Division of Dart Industries, Inc., sponsor of the 4-H home management program, eight awards.

Continuing their financial support of 4-H scholarship programs at the $1,000 level are: International Harvester Company, six awards in the agricultural program; Eastman Kodak Company, six awards in photography; and General Motors, eight awards in safety.

Among sponsors boosting their scholarships to $800 this year are: The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, which awards six national scholarships in the bicycle program; Coats & Clark Inc., with six scholarships in clothing; and Montgomery Ward which offers six grants in the 4-H consumer education program.

Also recognizing the need to alleviate the financial strain on parents and their college-bound offspring are Celanese Chemical Company, A Division of Celanese Corporation, sponsor of the 4-H beef program, and Moorman Mfg. Co., which supports the swine program. Both companies will award six $800 scholarships to national winners in 1975.

Purina Dog Foods Group, Ralston Purina Company, sponsor of the 4-H dog care and training program, and General Foods Corporation, sponsor of the food-nutrition program, will each award six $800 scholarships this year.

Seven $800 scholarships will go to national winners in the 4-H health program, sponsored by Eli Lilly and Company. Nine $800 scholarships will be donated by Reader's Digest, sponsor of the leadership program.

Other donors of $800 scholarships are: Union Oil Company of California, six scholarships in the public speaking program; The Upjohn Company, six awards in the veterinary science program; and Hercules Incorporated, six grants in entomology.

National 4-H scholarship winners are chosen by the Cooperative Extension Service from among state award winners. The Extension Service in the 50 states conducts the many and varied 4-H programs, which are designed to give youth from 9 to 19 opportunities to "learn by doing" in activities that develop citizenship and leadership potential.

More than 7 million American youth participate in 4-H. They are eligible to submit their records for recognition at county and state levels in programs that offer medals of honor.

FROM THE ABC EVENING NEWS, JUNE 13, 1975
By HARRY REASONER

"The vote by the House of Representatives on Wednesday (June, 11), which in effect was an announcement by its' members that they will not pass an effective energy bill, was frightening. It's not too strong to say that this is the kind of legislative irresponsibility, that killed democracies. A nation which must have leadership and direction and cannot get it from its' legislature, turns to something else.

It's not new to see Congressman put their own short term personal interests ahead of the national interests, but this was an exceptionally clear cut and important case.

Here was a House completely in the hands of one party. Here was a bill that leaders of that party had worked out over a long period. Here is a leadership of the party pleading with the membership for support, and here is the membership cheerfully playing decline and fall.

I suspect that the solution is more politics rather than less; some form of the parliamentary system which in forces a certain party discipline, for members who voted as they did on Wednesday would have to go immediately to the voters. Otherwise we will go on with a Congress that acts only when it is overwhelmingly scared, as in 1933, or dangerously dominated by a strong executive.

I don't know whether it was the right energy bill or not, but any bill that makes sense is going to prescribe some sacrifices and Congress won't vote for those. That just means that when the sacrifices inevitably comes they'll be far worse.

I hope the great House majority is pleased with itself.

4-H Donors

Chicago, Ill. – Four donors of 4-H college scholarships have boosted their grants to the $1,000 level this year. This brings to seven the total number of businesses, corporations, and foundations offering $1,000 awards in 1975.

For the first time total scholarship funding through the National 4-H Service Committee will top $200,000. Nearly 60 donors have pledged $205,000, an increase of 13 per cent over the 1974 total of $181,000.

More than 250 scholarships will be awarded to deserving 4-H'ers in 1975. Many of these grants will be presented during the 54th National 4-H Congress to be held here Nov. 30 - Dec. 4.

Donors who increased their scholarship awards from $700 to $1,000 are: The Firestone Tire & Rubber Company, sponsor of the 4-H automotive program, eight awards; John Deere, sponsor of the conservation of natural resources program, six awards; Carnation Company, sponsor of the dairy foods program, six awards; and Tupperware Home Parties, Division of Dart Industries, Inc., sponsor of the 4-H home management program, eight awards.

Continuing their financial support of 4-H scholarship programs at the $1,000 level are: International Harvester Company, six awards in the agricultural program; Eastman Kodak Company, six awards in photography; and General Motors, eight awards in safety.

Among sponsors boosting their scholarships to $800 this year are: The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, which awards six national scholarships in the bicycle program; Coats & Clark Inc., with six scholarships in clothing; and Montgomery Ward which offers six grants in the 4-H consumer education program.

Also recognizing the need to alleviate the financial strain on parents and their college-bound offspring are Celanese Chemical Company, A Division of Celanese Corporation, sponsor of the 4-H beef program, and Moorman Mfg. Co., which supports the swine program. Both companies will award six $800 scholarships to national winners in 1975.

Purina Dog Foods Group, Ralston Purina Company, sponsor of the 4-H dog care and training program, and General Foods Corporation, sponsor of the food-nutrition program, will each award six $800 scholarships this year.

Seven $800 scholarships will go to national winners in the 4-H health program, sponsored by Eli Lilly and Company. Nine $800 scholarships will be donated by Reader's Digest, sponsor of the leadership program.

Other donors of $800 scholarships are: Union Oil Company of California, six scholarships in the public speaking program; The Upjohn Company, six awards in the veterinary science program; and Hercules Incorporated, six grants in entomology.

National 4-H scholarship winners are chosen by the Cooperative Extension Service from among state award winners. The Extension Service in the 50 states conducts the many and varied 4-H programs, which are designed to give youth from 9 to 19 opportunities to "learn by doing" in activities that develop citizenship and leadership potential.

More than 7 million American youth participate in 4-H. They are eligible to submit their records for recognition at county and state levels in programs that offer medals of honor.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

June 16, 1975

To the Editor:
Daily Standard
Sikeston, Mo. 63801

Dear Editor:

Enclosed is a commentary by Harry Reasoner from the June 13 ABC Evening News. I hope you will see fit to publish it. Thank you very much.

Sincerely,
Timothy P. O'Herin
Treasurer
New Madrid Co.
Republican Club

FROM THE ABC EVENING NEWS, JUNE 13, 1975
By HARRY REASONER

"The vote by the House of Representatives on Wednesday (June, 11), which in effect was an announcement by its' members that they will not pass an effective energy bill, was frightening. It's not too strong to say that this is the kind of legislative irresponsibility, that killed democracies. A nation which must have leadership and direction and cannot get it from its' legislature, turns to something else.

It's not new to see Congressman put their own short term personal interests ahead of the national interests, but this was an exceptionally clear cut and important case.

Here was a House completely in the hands of one party. Here was a bill that leaders of that party had worked out over a long period. Here is a leadership of the party pleading with the membership for support, and here is the membership cheerfully playing decline and fall.

I suspect that the solution is more politics rather than less; some form of the parliamentary system which in forces a certain party discipline, for members who voted as they did on Wednesday would have to go immediately to the voters. Otherwise we will go on with a Congress that acts only when it is overwhelmingly scared, as in 1933, or dangerously dominated by a strong executive.

I don't know whether it was the right energy bill or not, but any bill that makes sense is going to prescribe some sacrifices and Congress won't vote for those. That just means that when the sacrifices inevitably comes they'll be far worse.

I hope the great House majority is pleased with itself.

3 PSC appointees sworn in

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — "It's a rare opportunity when there are three vacancies on the Public Service Commission," Gov. Christopher S. Bond said Friday as his three appointees to the commission were sworn in at formal ceremonies.

Bond—saying he had appointed Hugh Sprague, Stephen Jones and James Mulvaney after much thought—added that because of inflation "it becomes even more important that the public interests are recognized."

The three men named to the five-member commission represent a "broad background," the governor said. Mulvaney is a former Democratic legislator-milkman from Jennings, Jones a Kansas City realtor and fund raiser for Republican Bond, and Sprague the governor's former press aide and legal counsel.

It was the first time since 1941 that three commissioners had been sworn in at once and state elected officials, families and lobbyists were on hand for the event.

Commission Chariman Robert Pierce, appointed earlier by Bond, said the new commissioners will be busy in their jobs, which pay $28,000 a year.

"It seems like everybody and their second cousin has applied to us for increases," he said of the utlity rate-setting body.

"This is more than a 40-hour a week job," he said, noting the commission now has nine major cases pending calling for increases in utilities' gross annual reveneus of $142 million.

"I'm not sure whether congratulations or condolances are in order today," Atty. Gen. John Danforth said in introducing Sprague.

State Treasurer James Spainhower, lauding Mulvaney, said "he represents the general public perhaps in a way this commission has never had before."

State Auditor Gerge Lehr praised Jones as a "participant in the community for many years."

Mulvaney pledged to "hear more from the folks" on the commission. He also said he would work to strengthen relations with the legislature.

"The PSC never had anyting to do with the legislatue," he said.

children, the Urban Renewal Authority, Housing Authority, agencies of the Charleston Community Development Program and Food for the Elderly Program and a multi-purpose recreational-meeting room.

Authorities in the town are busy planning for a better tomorrow, and for a city which, perhaps, better reflects the styles and flavors of the South than most in the area and will blend the best of the past with the needs of the future.

"History of Mississippi County", authored by Mrs. Betty Powell, head librarian of the Mississippi County Library helped immensely in the preparation of this article.

The Kelly woman was taken to Madison County Hospital in Fredericktown.

A two-vehicle mishap occurred at 4:50 p.m. on Route WW, one mile east of New Madrid involving three New Madrid residents.

A westbound car driven by James Jackson Higgerson, 47, slowed to make a left turn and swung out wide. A pickup truck, also traveling west, driven by Jane Ann Dawson, 18, braked, but was unable to avoid striking the Higgerson car in the rear, causing the pickup truck to run off the levee and overturn.

The Dawson woman and a passenger in the vehicle, George W. Dawson, 20, were taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston for treatment of minor injuries.

The Prayer

"I have made the earth, and created man upon it: I, even my hands, have stretched out the heavens; and all their hosts have I commanded." (Isaiah 45:12, ASV)

PRAYER: O God, master architect of the universe, help us see all about us the perfection in Your creation. Amen.

Men on raft 13 days

GALVESTON, Tex. (AP) — Two men who spent 13 days drifting across the Gulf of Mexico in an eight-foot rubber raft say they drank their own urine to stay alive. One even offered to kill himself so his comrade could have something to eat.

Richard Lebo, 36, and Gary Gillespie, 21, were exhausted but in good condition today after being rescued Thursday by a Coast Guard helicopter. They were first spotted 50 miles south of Galveston by a private helicopter which did not have enough fuel to stop.

The two had been drifting in the raft since their 48-foot cabin cruiser, Caroline, sank off the Yucatan coast on June 6 while enroute from Key West, Fla., to the Central American country of Belize.

Still missing was Andy Carmone, who Lebo said signed on as a crewman just before they left. A search began for the man, who was believed to be in a raft.

"I told him I ain't no cannibal so just get your mind off that," Gillespie said.

FIRE

The fire department answered a call at 6:40 p.m. to extinguish a fire on a telephone pole by the First United Methodist Church on Highway 61. A wheat field burning nearby ignited the pole. No damage was reported.

POLICE ARRESTS

James T. Scally, 60, 313 Adam, failure to appear in City Court; Clyde Parder, Box 153, Bertrand, probation violation.

children, the Urban Renewal Authority, Housing Authority, agencies of the Charleston Community Development Program and Food for the Elderly Program and a multi-purpose recreational-meeting room.

Authorities in the town are busy planning for a better tomorrow, and for a city which, perhaps, better reflects the styles and flavors of the South than most in the area and will blend the best of the past with the needs of the future.

"History of Mississippi County", authored by Mrs. Betty Powell, head librarian of the Mississippi County Library helped immensely in the preparation of this article.

The Kelly woman was taken to Madison County Hospital in Fredericktown.

A two-vehicle mishap occurred at 4:50 p.m. on Route WW, one mile east of New Madrid involving three New Madrid residents.

A westbound car driven by James Jackson Higgerson, 47, slowed to make a left turn and swung out wide. A pickup truck, also traveling west, driven by Jane Ann Dawson, 18, braked, but was unable to avoid striking the Higgerson car in the rear, causing the pickup truck to run off the levee and overturn.

The Dawson woman and a passenger in the vehicle, George W. Dawson, 20, were taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston for treatment of minor injuries.

The Prayer

"I have made the earth, and created man upon it: I, even my hands, have stretched out the heavens; and all their hosts have I commanded." (Isaiah 45:12, ASV)

PRAYER: O God, master architect of the universe, help us see all about us the perfection in Your creation. Amen.

Men on raft 13 days

GALVESTON, Tex. (AP) — Two men who spent 13 days drifting across the Gulf of Mexico in an eight-foot rubber raft say they drank their own urine to stay alive. One even offered to kill himself so his comrade could have something to eat.

Richard Lebo, 36, and Gary Gillespie, 21, were exhausted but in good condition today after being rescued Thursday by a Coast Guard helicopter. They were first spotted 50 miles south of Galveston by a private helicopter which did not have enough fuel to stop.

The two had been drifting in the raft since their 48-foot cabin cruiser, Caroline, sank off the Yucatan coast on June 6 while enroute from Key West, Fla., to the Central American country of Belize.

Still missing was Andy Carmone, who Lebo said signed on as a crewman just before they left. A search began for the man, who was believed to be in a raft.

"I told him I ain't no cannibal so just get your mind off that," Gillespie said.

THE LAST DAYS OF JOHN SIKES

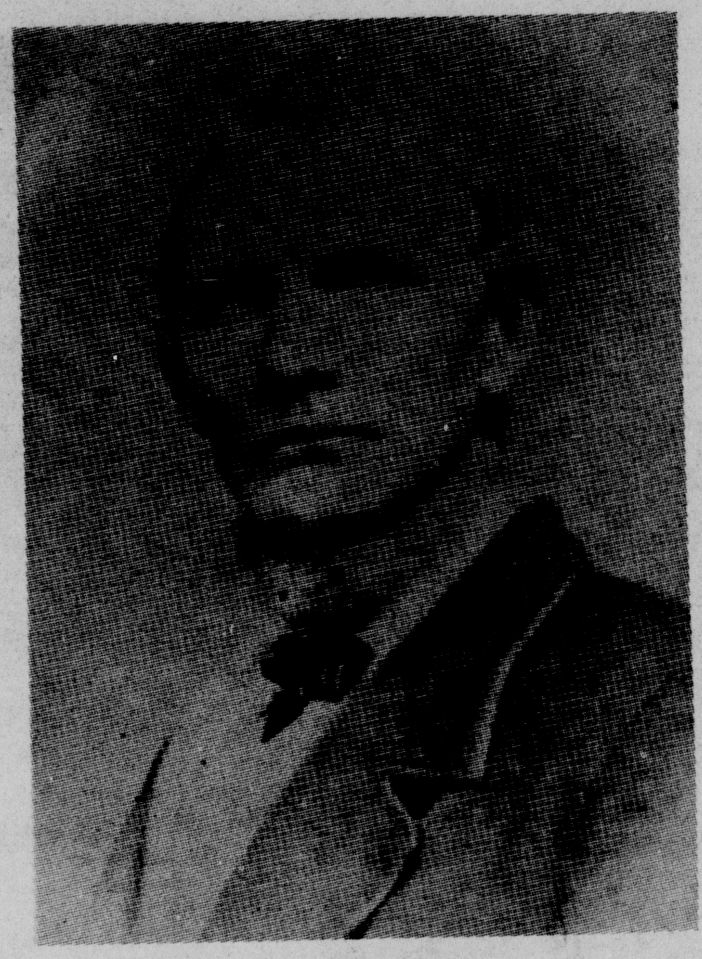
BY ROBERT VAUGHAN
PART 11



JOHN SIKES

December, 1867. It was close to Christmas, and in Sikeston the merchants were already beginning to decorate their stores. It had been a wet, cold winter, and even now a slow, steady drenching rain fell across the bootheel.

The cold, prolonged rain had brought tempers to a razor's edge, and incidents grew to irritations, irritations to anger and anger to rage. William Maulsby lived on a farm north of town, and he had just undergone an experience which had left him highly agitated.

Several hogs which belonged to a neighboring farmer had been driven by high water to a patch of dry land on Maulsby's place. He fed them for a few days, then later, when the owner came for his pigs, instead of receiving thanks he was accused of attempting to steal one.

Maulsby, who had expected a pig as payment for his services, was thrown into a rage and he informed the owner of the pigs that if he didn't leave at once he would fill his 'backsides with buckshot". He reinforced his statement with a brandish of his shotgun.

That incident happened on the night of December 19, and Maulsby brooded about it for most of the night. The next morning, still angry, he arose early and decided to ride into town.

Although it had stopped raining it was still cold and wet, and Maulsby decided that an overcoat wasn't enough to keep him warm. He took a full bottle of whiskey to help ward off the chill.

William Maulsby rode south on Kingshighway. Eight miles ahead of him was the town of Sikeston.

John Sikes, who had founded the town, then abandoned it during the War Between the States, had now returned. His old store was gone, burned during the war. But John Sikes was a skillful merchant and couldn't be kept down long. When he returned to Sikeston he resumed business, this time with a partner, a man named William Hughes. Their store was located where the Buckner-Ragsdale store now stands.

It wasn't a long walk from John's house to the store. He and his wife lived near where the Malone Theater is now located. The big oak tree, from which John had been hanged in 1864, was visible to him during his daily walks to the store. Passersby sometimes noticed that John would look at the tree and rub his neck gingerly, recalling no doubt the moments of terror from that day. A few had commented unfavorably about John leaving Sikeston during the war, but John never doubted that he had done the right thing. John was an honest man, and he had proven his bravery that day with the Raiders. But he was not a violent man, and the peaceful Sikeston of 1867 was much more to his liking.

John opened the door to his store and got ready for the day's business. Customers began arriving right away, some to buy for Christmas, and some to pass the time of day. John let them use his store as an unofficial meeting place, and sometimes he joined them. This morning, however, he had business to attend to in the back, so when William Maulsby arrived, John didn't see him come through the door.

Maulsby stepped inside. He was splattered with mud from his journey, and was already drunk as a result of consuming more than half a bottle of whiskey. He cocked his shotgun and waved it around the room, pointing it at the frightened customers.

"Anyone in here think I won't use this?" he asked. "You just let someone else call me a thief, and I'll show you I can use this."

"No one called you anything," one of the customers said fearfully.

"And no one had better, either," Maulsby said. He turned the whiskey bottle up to his lips and took several more swallows, then wiped the back of his hand across his lips. He smiled crookedly and held the bottle out, offering it to the men who were sitting around the stove in the store. "Here," he said. "To show there's no hard feelings you fellas can have a drink."

The men looked at each other uneasily. Maulsby raised his shotgun. The smile left his face. "I said take a drink!" he shouted.

John Sikes, who had been at the back of the store, heard the commotion. He came out to the front and saw Maulsby standing there, holding a shotgun in one hand and a whiskey bottle in the other.

"Bill, what are you doing in here, raising cain this early in the day?" he asked.

"That's what I come to town for," Maulsby said. "I'm going to get drunk and raise all kinds of cain."

"Well you won't be needing this," John said. He put his hand on the barrel of Maulsby's shotgun. Maulsby jerked it back and pointed it at him. "Leave my gun be," he said.

"What do you need it for?" John asked, easily. "You aren't likely to turn up any rabbits in any of the bars," he added, laughing.

The others laughed uneasily, and after a few seconds Maulsby joined them. "No," he said. "I reckon not."

"Why don't you just let me keep it? When you're ready to go home I'll give it back to you."

Maulsby didn't hand the gun to John, so John just took it. He snatched it cleanly, and had it before Maulsby realized what was happening.

"I'll be wantin' it back," Maulsby said.

"When you get ready to go home it'll be here," John promised. "But I'll not have you shooting up my town."

Maulsby left the store and began visiting the bars in town. He drank heavily for the rest of the day, telling everyone who would listen that he would kill on sight the farmer who had accused

There is something about a newspaper that is synonymous with the highest ideals of man. Freedom, personal rights, Democracy, all are noble phrases, but they have substance only when there is a free press.

From Thomas Paine's COMMON SENSE, to the Pentagon Papers of the WASHINGTON POST, words in print have been the guardian of America. Frequently newspapers have been placed in the role of being portenders of misfortune. Because of this it has sometimes become the mark of political conservatives to attack not the ills of our society, but the news media which exposes these ills to the light of public scrutiny.

A newspaper of any size holds a sacred trust. The First Amendment in the Bill of Rights guarantees the freedom of the press. Inherent with that freedom is responsibility. Responsible journalism means that reporters have the obligation to inform the public, whether that information discloses corruption in a Washington mansion, or exposes pandering in a Sikeston massage parlor.

Investigative reporting is a two edged sword, however, and when it slashes away at corruption it may also cut the bonds of popular support upon which the newsman rests. It is a mark of courage that men of character have sacrificed their security to print the truth. There are reporters in prison now, testing the doctrine of privacy of source of information. There are journalist out of work because their principals have no price tag.

The Vietnam war made careers for men like David Halberstam, and ended the lives of women like Dickie Chappelle. It also created a breed of writer, heretofore unknown in America. The writer who was persecuted for his words.

Bernard Fall was a brilliant journalist who tried to warn the United States of the pitfalls of Vietnam fifteen years ahead of his time. He was discredited and remanded to relative obscurity by the time he stepped on a land mine in 1968. Marguirite Higgens filed true copy in the midst of lies. For this she lost her job, and later her life, standing up for her ideals. Concerned Army Officers saw the service they loved teetering on the brink of disaster and tried to save it by writing about it. They had their careers taken from them.

Responsible journalism also means that the bonds of public trust shouldn't be severed. This sometimes happens in the form of 'yellow journalism', and there are newsmen who depend on shock rather than truth, and inflamation, rather than information. When this happens everyone is the poorer for it.

Even Thomas Jefferson, one of the most eloquent defenders of freedom of the press, turned sour on newspapers late in his life. The man who once said, "Given a choice of newspapers with no government, or government with no newspapers, I would choose newspapers with no government." He changed his opinion, and said in 1813; "Nothing can now be believed which is seen in a newspaper. Truth itself becomes suspicious by being put into that polluted vehicle."

The problem is how to eliminate irresponsible journalism without sacrificing the principals of freedom. Descriminate repression, like selective promiscuity, doesn't exist. The law which would prohibit you from reading THE HAPPY HOOKER, could also be used to ban ALL THE PRESIDENT'S MEN, should it prove politically expedient.

The final answer lies not in governmental control, but in public descretion. Yellow journalism and pornography will exist, only so long as there is a market. In the system of free enterprise, the final authority is economic survival. Freedom of the press carries with it a parallel freedom, one which is just as sacred. It is the freedom to read ... or not to read.

him of stealing pigs. Twice he tried to pick a fight. Stories of the disturbance he was creating kept coming into John's store throughout the day. A customer would come inside, warm his hands over the stove, then laugh and tell the others what a fool Maulsby was making of himself. "It's a good thing you took his gun," one of them said to John. "He would have probably shot someone by now."

Late that afternoon, Maulsby returned to the store. It had begun to snow lightly, and Maulsby stood just inside the door with flakes of snow sticking in his hair and on his overcoat. His face was red from the cold and the whiskey. Someone remembered later that it was almost as red as some of the Christmas decorations in the store.

"I'm ready to go home now," Maulsby slurred. "I want my gun."

"Wouldn't you like to leave it here until tomorrow?" John offered. "You could come back when you've had a chance to sober up."

"No," Maulsby said. "It's too long a ride. I won't feel like riding into town tomorrow."

"That's for sure," one of the men in the store said, laughing. "You'll be paying for this tomorrow."

"I suppose it'll be alright to give you your gun," John said. He took the gun from behind the counter and Maulsby reached for it. "No," John said. "When you get on your horse I'll give it to you."

"My horse is tied up out front," Maulsby said. Maulsby turned and walked through the door, and John followed him. When they reached the horse John handed him his gun.

"Now Bill, you go on home before you get yourself in trouble," John said. "You've had your fun."

Maulsby nodded at him. "I'm going," he promised.

John smiled. "Have a nice Christmas," he said. He turned and started to walk back to his store.

There was a sudden explosion and all up and down Front Street, shocked citizens of the town looked around to see what happened. John was lying face down in the street. His back was torn open by the blast, and the red contrasted sharply with the white flakes of snow which began to sprinkle onto the blood. A pool of crimson spread slowly in the mud.

"Stop him, somebody! That man shot Mister Sikes!" someone shouted.

Maulsby stood holding his gun with smoke still curling up from the end of the barrel. He had a slight smile on his face, and he turned and tried to climb on his horse as non-chalantly as if nothing had happened.

Maulsby was so drunk that he couldn't even get on his horse, and while he was still trying, two men reached him. His gun, which held only one charge of buckshot, was useless to him, and they made the arrest easily.

him of stealing pigs. Twice he tried to pick a fight. Stories of the disturbance he was creating kept coming into John's store throughout the day. A customer would come inside, warm his hands over the stove, then laugh and tell the others what a fool Maulsby was making of himself. "It's a good thing you took his gun," one of them said to John. "He would have probably shot someone by now."

Late that afternoon, Maulsby returned to the store. It had begun to snow lightly, and Maulsby stood just inside the door with flakes of snow sticking in his hair and on his overcoat. His face was red from the cold and the whiskey. Someone remembered later that it was almost as red as some of the Christmas decorations in the store.

"I'm ready to go home now," Maulsby slurred. "I want my gun."

"Wouldn't you like to leave it here until tomorrow?" John offered. "You could come back when you've had a chance to sober up."

"No," Maulsby said. "It's too long a ride. I won't feel like riding into town tomorrow."

"That's for sure," one of the men in the store said, laughing. "You'll be paying for this tomorrow."

"I suppose it'll be alright to give you your gun," John said. He took the gun from behind the counter and Maulsby reached for it. "No," John said. "When you get on your horse I'll give it to you."

"My horse is tied up out front," Maulsby said. Maulsby turned and walked through the door, and John followed him. When they reached the horse John handed him his gun.

"Now Bill, you go on home before you get yourself in trouble," John said. "You've had your fun."

Maulsby nodded at him. "I'm going," he promised.

John smiled. "Have a nice Christmas," he said. He turned and started to walk back to his store.

There was a sudden explosion and all up and down Front Street, shocked citizens of the town looked around to see what happened. John was lying face down in the street. His back was torn open by the blast, and the red contrasted sharply with the white flakes of snow which began to sprinkle onto the blood. A pool of crimson spread slowly in the mud.

"Stop him, somebody! That man shot Mister Sikes!" someone shouted.

Maulsby stood holding his gun with smoke still curling up from the end of the barrel. He had a slight smile on his face, and he turned and tried to climb on his horse as non-chalantly as if nothing had happened.

Maulsby was so drunk that he couldn't even get on his horse, and while he was still trying, two men reached him. His gun, which held only one charge of buckshot, was useless to him, and they made the arrest easily.

John was rushed to a doctor and the doctor tried gamely to save his life. He picked most of the buckshot out, but vital arteries and nerves had been cut. John didn't regain consciousness.

William Maulsby was taken to Benton and put in jail. The next morning when the sheriff went in to talk to him, Maulsby was gone. His cell door was still locked, but the smoke stack from the heating stove had been pulled away from the flue hole, and the jailer theorized that Maulsby had escaped that way.

In the meantime the citizens of Sikeston mounted a death watch over John Sikes. Concerned friends and neighbors brought food to Catherine, John's wife, and they waited with her for some sign. Three days later, on December 23rd, at nine o'clock in the morning, the doctor pronounced John Sikes dead.

Maulsby was seen once in Texas, some time later, but he was never brought to justice for the murder of John Sikes.

John was buried in a small cemetery located near the house occupied by Fred Matthews, on Greer Street. An interesting, but bizzare follow up to the John Sikes story occurred many years later. Some workmen in the cemetery accidently moved a stone which exposed John Sikes' coffin. His coffin had a glass window over the face and his features could be seen. Word got around and several mid-twentieth century Sikestonians got a chance to look into the face of the man who founded their town.

Some children were playing near the gravesite, however, and one of them threw a rock at the window and broke it. As soon as air got to John's body, it deteriorated rapidly. His body, and the others in the small cemetery who were buried there with him, were moved to their present location in the city cemetery.

Today John Sikes' grave is marked with a nice tombstone, which identifies him, and gives the dates of birth and death. There is no city-sponsored marker of any kind ... not ever a small plaque, to honor the man who gave birth to the city of Sikeston.
